Carolina Basketball...

A Tradition of Consistent Success

"North Carolina has a great team and great tradition. North Carolina is what college basketball is all about, academically and athletically."
—Rollie Massimino at Birmingham in March, 1985.

When the Villanova coach made that statement about the Tar Heel basketball program during last year's NCAA Tournament, he was simply reiterating what countless others have been saying for years.

Actually, the record speaks for itself quite clearly—when it comes to graduating players and winning basketball games, no one does it better than Carolina. This year's Tar Heel team will be trying to keep up an amazing record, both in the classroom (as shown on the inside back cover of this brochure) and on the court, as indicated below.

At a time when college athletics is facing numerous problems, the Carolina basketball program could well serve as a model for the way things should be done, for the way a major sport can be properly handled in an academic setting, for the way a program can be based on integrity and honesty and still be extremely successful.

And, the Tar Heels have certainly been successful.

Kentucky and Carolina have won more games than any other schools in college basketball history. Since Dean Smith has been the Tar Heels' head coach, the record has been even more amazing.

Over the last 20 years Carolina has won more games than any other school in the country. The Tar Heels also have the best winning percentage in the country during the last 10 years and over the past five years as well.

That consistency has been the most remarkable aspect of the Carolina basketball program. At a time when there is more balance than ever in college basketball, the Tar Heels still have great teams year-in and year-out. Other schools have had up-and-down cycles, but the success in Chapel Hill has been consistent.

That consistency on the court, and a sensational graduation rate for players at one of the nation's leading academic institutions, make the Carolina program what it is—what college basketball should be all about.

The 1985-86 Outlook

With nine returning lettermen, headed by All-America candidate Brad Daugherty, the University of North Carolina could again have one of the best teams in college basketball.

However, improvement will be needed from all of those players if Carolina is to have a chance of matching the accomplishments of last year's great team. The Tar Heels posted a 27-9 record last season, tied for first place in the Atlantic Coast Conference race and reached the Final Eight of the NCAA Tournament.

"We will be capable of playing with anyone in the country," says Coach Dean Smith about the upcoming year. "But, there will also be about 150 teams capable of playing with us. There is such great balance in college basketball today that we must play better than we did last year in order to have an outstanding season."

Smith thinks his team is capable of doing just that.

"We will be a more experienced team than we were last year with our incoming freshmen providing a little better depth," he says. "Still, we may not be extremely quick. We must make use of our size, try to take better care of the basketball and play with the poise and unselfishness we displayed last February and March."

Unlike a year ago, when Carolina opened the season with three new starters, this will be a veteran squad. Daugherty, Steve Hale, Kenny Smith and Joe Wolf were regulars last season. In addition, the Tar Heels also return two part-time starters in Dave Popson and Curtis Hunter and a seventh player, Warren Martin, who saw extensive action.

Daugherty figures to be one of the premier players in the college game. A 6-11¾, 245-pound senior from Black Mountain, N.C., he led the Atlantic Coast Conference in rebounding last year with a 9.7 average, scored 17.3 points a game and shot 62.5 percent from the field, the eighth-best figure in the country. He and Maryland's Len Bias were the only players in the ACC to finish among the league's top 10 in scoring, rebounding, field goal percentage and free throw shooting.

"We hope Brad will continue the rapid improvement he has made since coming to Carolina as a 16-year-old freshman," says Smith. "He has improved every facet of his play, although he still needs to be a little more aggressive as a rebounder. His confidence seems to be soaring after his excellent junior season and I'm anticipating a great year from him."

While Daugherty gives the Tar Heels one of the nation's top pivotmen, Carolina also has one of the finest backcourts in the country in Hale and Kenny Smith.

Hale, a 6-4, 180-pound senior from Jenks, Okla., is a sensational defensive player who last year covered the opposition's hottest player, whether he was 6-0 or 6-7. He averaged 10.6 points a game, rebounded very well and led the ACC in free throw shooting with a school-record mark of 87.6 percent. He is now fully recovered from a shoulder injury suffered against Middle Tennessee State in the NCAA Tournament last season.

Kenny Smith looks for an open teammate.

Steve Hale grabs a rebound in traffic.

Smith had some brilliant games at point guard last year and the Tar Heels hope those will be commonplace this season. The 6-3, 171-pound junior from Queens, N.Y., broke Phil Ford's single-season assist record with 235 and also scored 12.3 points a game. He shot 51.8 percent from the field and 86.0 from the foul line. He also began to come on defensively, although continued improvement is needed there.

Returning to join Daugherty up front is Wolf, a 6-10, 235-pound junior from Kohler, Wis. He did a very good job in his first year as a starter, averaging 9.1 points and 5.3 rebounds. In addition, he was a good enough ballhandler to allow Carolina to use three big men in the lineup together quite a bit. However, he needs to be more consistent and continue to improve defensively.

The small forward position was manned by several different players last season with Popson, Hunter, Wolf and Buzz Peterson seeing the most action there. Peterson and reserves Cliff Morris and Gary Roper were the only seniors on last year's team.

By playing Popson or Wolf at that spot, the Tar Heels could put a very big lineup on the court. Popson is a 6-9, 225-pound junior from Ashley, Pa. who has improved in each of his first two years at Carolina. However, he must rebound better than he has in the past and show continued improvement in other areas, too.

Hunter, a 6-5, 195-pound junior from Durham, N.C., gave the Tar Heels a quicker team when he was at forward last season. He has worked hard during the summer on his shooting and has the natural ability to be an excellent defensive player.

Another key figure is Martin, one of the biggest surprises in the ACC last year. The 6-11½, 243-pound senior from Axton, Va., has been plagued by injuries throughout his career, but did a sensational job in a reserve role last season. He scored 9.6 points a game, shooting 59.6 percent from the field, and averaged 5.5 rebounds. He also led the Tar Heels in blocked shots with 81.

Unfortunately, Martin suffered a stress fracture in his right foot late in the year. Because of that, he wasn't able to work out as much as had been hoped during the summer. He must continue his rapid improvement if Carolina is to have a great season.

Other returning lettermen are 5-11 walk-on James Daye of Burlington, N.C. and Ranzino Smith, a 6-1, 193-pound sophomore from Chapel Hill. Smith got some valuable experience in the backcourt after Hale was injured in the NCAA Tournament. Although he had a low field goal percentage last year, he is a good shooter. He needs to improve defensively to get more playing time.

Rounding out the squad will be four incoming freshmen—6-9 Marty Hensley of Marion, N.C.; 6-5 Steve Bucknall of London, England; 6-5 Kevin Madden of Staunton, Va.; and 6-2 Jeff Lebo of Carlisle, Pa.

Hensley is a good prospect who needs to gain some weight and strength. Bucknall and Madden could challenge for playing time at small forward if they can pick up the fundamentals needed at that position. Both need to become better rebounders and better defensive players.

Lebo may have an easier time making the transition to college basketball because he has already learned to play without the ball. If he comes on defensively, he and Ranzino will provide backup help for the starting guards.

This Carolina team will be trying to uphold an amazing tradition. The Tar Heels have averaged almost 26 wins a year for the past 19 seasons, finished either first or second in the ACC standings for each of those 19 years and made 11 straight trips to the NCAA Tournament, the longest current streak in the nation. If they are to continue this success, they will do so by playing as recent Carolina teams.

"Offensively, we are going to fast break as much as possible," says Coach Smith. "If the break isn't there, then we'll look to get the ball inside for high percentage shots.

"We'll mix up our man-to-man defenses, sometimes using pressure and at other times playing soft. A lot of our defensive systems will depend on the players in the game."

Smith again sees a wide-open ACC race.

"We can be a contender if we don't have any major injuries," he says. "However, Georgia Tech has almost everyone back from a team which defeated us three times last year and Duke returns its key people.

"In addition, everyone else in the conference will be dangerous. We have so much balance that it's almost impossible to pick a first four. We tied for first place last year with a 9-5 record, but could have easily been 5-9. I expect a similar season with close games this year.

"Certainly, we'll find out in our first five games how good we are. UCLA and Iona are both expecting to be stronger after going to post-season tournaments last year and the field in the Great Alaskan Shootout is an excellent one.

"We will be a good team, but so will most of the teams we play."

Warren Martin feeds the ball inside.

What Smith Says About...

The 1985-86 Season

"If we remain healthy, I think we can be a very competitive team. Based on injuries in the last two seasons, I have to say we need to remain healthy.

"We will be a more experienced team than we were last year. Basically we have the same squad we had last season. Since I would like to think all our players improve each year, we should be a better team. I think we will be improved defensively because of the experience we gained last season. We're replacing last year's seniors— Buzz Peterson, Cliff Morris and Gary Roper—with four freshmen—Jeff Lebo, Steve Bucknall, Kevin Madden and Marty Hensley—and that could give us additional depth."

Strengths

"In February and March, last year's team played extremely well together. We've had equally unselfish teams, but none more unselfish. I think this team is capable of continuing that type of play.

"We have good size. But, in order for us to succeed, we must rebound relative to that size. We don't have great quickness going to the ball, but I'd like to think that through positioning we can rebound better than we did last year."

Concerns

"We don't have great quickness. We're going to try to play pressure and soft man-to-man defenses. At the beginning of each of my previous 24 years as head coach, we've been committed to pressure man-to-man. So this is a new beginning for me. But, after Joe Wolf got hurt last year, we had to back off that pressure and were successful some of the time with our soft man-to-man. So we will again try both this season.

"We also must take better care of the basketball. Because of our fast-paced style of play, we expect to throw the ball away some. But, we lost it too much without getting off a shot last year, particularly when we were playing our big lineup."

Brad Daugherty

"Brad came on at the end of last year and played extremely well. He had been inconsistent in his first two seasons here. But with added maturity, he was a much smarter and more confident player last year.

"He is very good at anticipating teammates' shots to get rebounding position. He still needs to work defensively. He's a good shot blocker now, but he can become a better one. We have complete confidence in his offensive ability. If we get him the ball down low, we feel he will either score or get fouled."

Kenny Smith

"Kenny has improved a great deal defensively. After two years as a starter, he has the feel for running our team and he should be headed for an outstanding season. He has explosive speed, that when coupled with his judgment on what is the correct play, makes him excellent on running a fast break. He has also developed strength by working in the weight room and that should help him as a defensive rebounder."

Steve Hale

"Steve is a tremendous all-around player. We may help him by keeping him strictly at the big guard and small forward positions. He won't have to worry about playing the quarterback spot which is really a completely different position. We're going to start out with the idea that he is going to concentrate only on the big guard spot and I think that will help him.

"We've played Steve on 5-5 guards and 6-7 power forwards and he's done remarkably well in each case. He will again be our defensive stopper. We expect continued improvement from him in rebounding, where he excelled last year at Maryland, and offensively."

The ACC Race

"The conference race should be similar to last year with tremendous balance throughout the league. Georgia Tech, Duke and Carolina have received a lot of pre-season attention, but every team has at least three returning starters. There weren't any easy games in the conference last year and there certainly won't be any this year, either. I again see a league with four or five losses winning or tying for the regular-season championship."

Brad Daugherty dives for a loose ball.

The Facts and Figures of Carolina Basketball

Winning basketball teams are nothing new at the University of North Carolina. Success in basketball is as traditional in Chapel Hill as the Old Well itself.

But, even Tar Heel fans have to shake their heads in amazement at what has been accomplished on the courts lately. In a history filled with excitement, the recent years may go down as the most incredible era of all.

For example, the Tar Heels have won 144 games during the last five seasons alone. Only twice in history have any schools ever won more games in a similar period—Adolph Rupp's greatest Kentucky teams of the late 1940's and UCLA from 1969 to 1973.

In this five-year stretch, Carolina is the only school in the country to reach the Final 16 of the NCAA Tournament each season. The Tar Heels won the national championship in 1982 and were second in 1981.

Carolina has finished first in the Atlantic Coast Conference regular-season race for four straight years. In what is generally considered the toughest and best-balanced league in college basketball, the Tar Heels have a five-year record of 57-13. That includes an incredible 14-0 mark in 1984.

Carolina is the only school in the country to finish in the top 10 of the final wire service polls in each of the last three seasons. In fact, the Tar Heels have finished in the top 10 for five straight years and 10 of the last 11.

What makes all of these recent feats even more stunning is the fact Carolina has done all this while playing against the best competition in the country. The Tar Heel schedule is annually ranked among the toughest in the nation.

These five years have done nothing but solidify Carolina's reputation as the premier basketball program in the country. Mention the Tar Heels anywhere in basketball circles and people immediately think of championship teams, All-America players and great coaching. Success on the basketball court has been a tradition in Chapel Hill for over seven decades.

The first intercollegiate game at Carolina was played in 1911. Since that time the Tar Heels have posted a record of 1,343 victories against only 505 losses. Sixty-four of the school's 74 teams have had winning records.

Only Kentucky has won more games than Carolina and the Wildcats began playing the sport eight years before the Tar Heels. Kentucky and Carolina also have the best won-loss percentages in collegiate history.

Carolina is one of only six schools to capture both an NCAA championship and a National Invitation Tournament title. The Tar Heels won NCAA crowns in 1957 and 1982 and swept the NIT in 1971. Carolina also was voted national champion in 1924 with a 26-0 record.

Since the NCAA Tournament was first played, Carolina has been one of the most dominant teams in the game. The Tar Heels have been one of the final four teams in the NCAA Tournament nine times. Only UCLA with 13 appearances has reached the Final Four more often.

Carolina has made seven trips to the Final Four in the last 19 years. In this period of time, again only UCLA has made more (11).

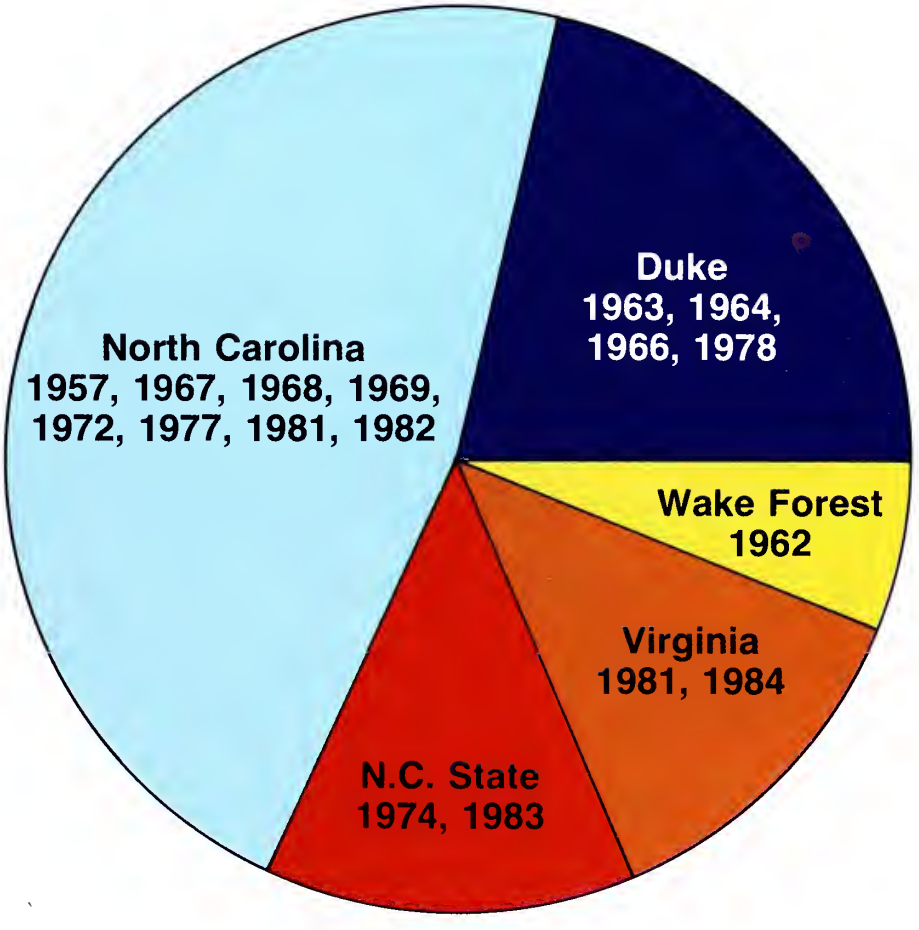
ACC teams have now made 17 trips to the Final Four. Carolina has accounted for eight of those.

The Tar Heels have won eight NCAA regional titles, including seven eastern championships. No one else has won more than three eastern crowns. Carolina's regional titles came in 1957, 1967, 1968, 1969, 1972, 1977, 1981 and 1982.

Carolina has played in a national post-season tournament each of the past 19 years. The 1970, 1971, 1973 and 1974 teams went to the NIT in New York. Those trips, of course, came before the NCAA Tournament was expanded to include more than one team from each conference. The Tar Heels have been in the NCAA field every year since 1975. That stretch of 11 straight NCAA appearances is the longest current streak in the nation. In fact, only UCLA, with 13, has ever had a streak of more consecutive NCAA trips.

No freshman class since 1963 has missed a post-season tournament at Carolina and only two, 1972 and 1973, have failed to go the Final Four.

The Tar Heels have dominated ACC



basketball throughout this 19-year stretch. Since 1967, Carolina has finished first in the league's regular-season race 13 times and has been second on the other six occasions. This 19-year stretch of finishing first or second in its conference standings has never been equalled by any other school in any other league.

In the last 19 years Carolina has won 485 games and lost just 118. That's a winning percentage of .804 and an average record of 25-6 a season. The Tar Heels have won more games than anyone in the country over the last 20 years (501 to 494 for UCLA), the last 10 years (264 to 254 for Georgetown) and the past five years (144 to 141 for Georgetown).

Carolina has finished in the top 10 of one of the wire service polls 15 times in the last 19 seasons. Eight times the Tar Heels have finished the year ranked as one of the top four teams in America. Only UCLA has been there more often in this stretch.

Although the Tar Heels have gained a lot of notoriety for the four-corners offense they use late in some games, they actually rank as one of the nation's highest-scoring teams in recent years. Carolina runs one of the best fast breaks in basketball and has averaged over 81 points a game since 1967.

However, the key to Carolina's success may be its changing man-to-man defenses. The Tar Heels mix their innovative and gambling scramble defense with their more conservative pressure man-to-man. In fact, Carolina's defense is so effective it actually helps the offense. Steals and easy layups have accounted for many Tar Heels points over the years. That's one of the reasons Carolina has the best shooting percentage in the country over the last 19 seasons. Carolina has hit at least 51 percent of its shots from the floor for an incredible 15 consecutive years. That percentage, of course, has also been helped by the unselfishness of the Tar Heel players in selecting only the best shots.

Many people refer to basketball as "a tournament sport" and the Tar Heels have excelled in tournament play. Carolina, in fact, has now won 53 tournament championships. The Tar Heels have competed in such events as the Holiday Festival in New York City, the Rainbow Classic in Honolulu, the Sugar Bowl Classic in New Orleans, the Great Alaskan Shootout in Anchorage and the Far West Classic in Portland.

Carolina has had at least one player on each of the last six U.S. Olympic basketball teams—Larry Brown in 1964; Charlie Scott in 1968; Bobby Jones in 1972; Walter Davis, Phil Ford, Mitch Kupchak and Tommy LaGarde in 1976; Al Wood in 1980; and Michael Jordan and Sam Perkins in 1984.

There have been dozens of All-Americas at Carolina. Sixteen of them have played in the Dean Smith Era alone—Billy Cunningham, Bob Lewis, Larry Miller, Charlie Scott, Dennis Wuycik, Bill Chamberlain, Robert McAdoo, Bobby Jones, Mitch Kupchak, Tommy LaGarde, Phil Ford, Mike O'Koren, Al Wood, James Worthy, Sam Perkins and Michael Jordan.

In the last decade Carolina players have been named consensus first-team All-America seven times. No other school has had that many first-team selections.

When Jordan was a unanimous choice as college basketball's National Player of the Year in 1984, it marked the eighth time a Tar Heel had been so honored. Jordan won that same award from The Sporting News in 1983 and Worthy had been named Co-National Player of the Year by the Helms Foundation in 1982. Other Tar Heels who were chosen as the best player in America were Jack Cobb in 1926, George Glamack in 1940 and 1941, Lennie Rosenbluth in 1957 and Ford in 1978.

The crowds which turn out to see the Tar Heels play are proof of the sport's great popularity in Chapel Hill. Intrasquad games have annually been 10,000 sellouts in Carmichael Auditorium. For years, students have slept at the arena the night before tickets became available just to be sure they would get into games. Educational Foundation members, who contribute large amounts of money to the athletic program, have been limited to two tickets in Carmichael. Faculty members have had to go on waiting lists to get into games. It was this demand for tickets which led to the construction of the 21,426-seat Student Activities Center on campus.

Most regular-season Tar Heel games are televised. Five Carolina games will be televised nationally this year by either NBC or CBS with many others being broadcast across the country by ESPN.

Basketball has always been a very special sport at Carolina. These facts and figures are an indication why.

Rates as a leading candidate for All-America honors in his senior season... Highly regarded by professional scouts, he has made all of the pre-season all-star checklists... One of the youngest players ever to perform in the Atlantic Coast Conference... Began practice this year at just 19 years of age... Originally came to Carolina as a 16-year-old freshman... Despite his youth, has made great progress throughout his Tar Heel career... Has great natural ability... Has worked to become a more consistent player... Gained confidence during an outstanding junior season... Was a more aggressive player last year... Showed great improvement as a rebounder last season and can still improve there... Led the ACC in rebounding, averaging 9.7 per game... Had a 17.3 scoring average with a field goal percentage of 62.5 and a free throw mark of 74.2... Was fifth in the ACC in scoring, second in field goal percentage and ninth in free throw accuracy... Finished eighth nationally in field goal percentage... Daugherty and Maryland's Len Bias were the only players to rank among the ACC's top 10 in scoring, rebounding and field goal and free throw shooting... Scored in double figures 32 times in 36 games... Was in double figures in rebounding on 20 occasions... Both scored and rebounded in double figures in the same game 17 times... Was sensational down the stretch... In Carolina's last 17 games, he averaged 17.5 points and 10.5 rebounds and had shooting percentages of 66.1 from the floor and 76.6 from the foul line... Scored a career-high 30 points in a homecourt win over Wake Forest... Then had a career-high 18 rebounds against the Deacons in the ACC Tournament... Turned in an outstanding performance in a 75-70 victory at LSU... Scored seven straight Carolina points during the last five minutes to put the Tar Heels ahead to stay... Three days later it was his great inside pass to Warren Martin for a layup at Maryland which gave Carolina a 51-50 lead over the Terps in the closing minutes... Moments later Daugherty added two free throws for a three-point edge and Carolina never trailed again... Had 23 points on nine of 12 shooting from the field and 12 rebounds in a 78-68 win at Duke... Hit 11 of 15 shots, scored 25 points and grabbed 11 rebounds in a NCAA Tournament victory over Middle Tennessee State... It was his basket which put Carolina ahead, 46-45, midway in the second half... He then scored six of the Tar Heels' next 10 points as Carolina took control of the game... Had 18 points and 12 rebounds two days later as the Tar Heels beat Notre Dame on its home court... Won all-tournament honors at the ACC Tournament, the NCAA sub-regional and the NCAA Southeast Regional... Selected the MVP at the sub-regional for his play against Middle Tennessee and Notre Dame... First-team All-ACC selection... Also named to the U.S. Basketball Writers' District All-America team... Chosen by his teammates as the squad's most valuable player... Played in 30 of 31 games as a sophomore, averaging 10.5 points and 5.6 rebounds... Missed an ACC Tournament game against Clemson with a hand injury... Highlight of the season may have been a 22-point, eight-rebound performance against Iona in the Holiday Festival at Madison Square Garden... Named to the all-tournament team there... Saw action in 35 of 36 games as a freshman... Played in a reserve role early in the year before moving into the starting lineup in the Tar Heels' 11th game... Averaged 8.2 points and 5.1 rebounds... Had 11 rebounds in a win against Ralph Sampson and Virginia in Charlottesville... Named second-team Freshman All-America by Basketball Weekly... Played on an all-star team which represented the United States in the Jones Cup Tournament in Taiwan in the summer of 1984... Top rebounder on that team which won the championship with a 9-0 record... Turned down an invitation to play on another U.S. all-star team last summer... Heads into his senior year as the 11th-leading rebounder in Carolina history with 697... The Tar Heels' 19th-leading all-time scorer with 1,225 points... His career field goal percentage of 60.41 has only been topped at Carolina by Bobby Jones (60.77)... Has become a good defender and with continued work can become a better shot-blocker... Coached by Bill Burrows at Charles D. Owen High School... Did not play as a freshman there, but was the team's student manager... Was on the junior varsity as a sophomore and varsity as a junior and senior... Led his team to the state tournament in his senior season... Has an older brother, Steve, who played for Carolina assistant coach Roy Williams when he was the head coach at Owen.

One of the premier players in college basketball... Teams with Kenny Smith to form one of the nation's top backcourts... Should contend for all-star honors... A great defensive player... Has covered everyone from point guards to centers in his time at Carolina and always done an outstanding job... Called by Michael Jordan one of the best defenders he has played against... Capable of playing any of the perimeter positions... As a sophomore, did an excellent job of filling in for an injured Smith at the point guard spot... Saw most of his action at the big guard position last year and that should be the case again this season... Tremendous competitor with excellent basketball savvy... A lefthander who is a fine shooter and very good passer... Had a great junior year... Averaged 10.6 points a game, shooting 51.8 percent from the field and 87.6 percent from the foul line... Broke York Larese's old school free throw percentage record of 86.8... Led the Atlantic Coast Conference and was 14th nationally in foul shooting... Also had 168 assists, the eighth-highest total in the ACC... Drew a team-high 36 charges and also had 57 steals... Scored a career-high 23 points to spark a come-from-behind victory over Florida State... Also had seven assists and seven rebounds in that game... Equalled a career-high with 13 assists in a homecourt win over Clemson... Also had 13 as a sophomore against Duke... That's just one short of Phil Ford's school record... Turned in a sensational all-around performance at Maryland with a career-high 12 rebounds, 12 points, six assists and great defensive work... It was his three-point play with 2:40 to play which stretched a one-point lead to three in a 60-54 win... Suffered a separated shoulder in the Tar Heels' opening NCAA Tournament game against Middle Tennessee State and missed the rest of the year... His loss severely hurt Carolina's NCAA Tournament chances... The Tar Heels' top defensive player last season and was voted the team's most inspirational player by his teammates... Played in all 31 games as a sophomore with 113 assists and a 5.2 scoring average... Shot 55.8 percent from the floor that year and 83.7 from the free throw line... Came off the bench to help spark a win at Duke with 13 points, hitting six of seven field goal attempts... Had a season-high 15 points at Arkansas with six assists and four steals... Had seen action as a backup point guard as a freshman... Played in all 36 games... In fact, had never missed a game at Carolina until last year's shoulder injury... Enters his senior season with a career total of 351 assists, the seventh-highest figure in school history... Has a career free throw percentage of 80.56, also the seventh best ever at Carolina... Appears to be 100 percent after being bothered by injuries in his previous time in Chapel Hill... Could make a major contribution to the Tar Heel season... Started at times last year at small forward... Also has the ability to play in the backcourt... A hard worker with good speed... Played in 30 of Carolina's 36 games last season... Scored 120 points for a 4.0 average, shooting 56.3 percent from the field... Missed two weeks of action in late January after suffering a sprained knee against SMU... Had been playing the best basketball of his career at the time of the injury... Scored seven points in a 75-74 come-from-behind victory over Maryland... After Carolina had taken a 73-72 lead in the closing moments of that game, he intercepted a Maryland inbounds pass and was immediately fouled... Made two free throws with four seconds on the clock to seal the win... Scored 10 points at Virginia three days later as the Tar Heels rallied for a 65-61 victory... It was his dunk with 18 seconds to play which gave Carolina a four-point lead in that game... However, was injured the following day against SMU... Scored a career-high 14 points later in the season against Clemson, making seven of eight field goal attempts... Hit two free throws with 48 seconds left to account for the winning points in a 57-51 ACC Tournament win over N.C. State... Made an alert play against Notre Dame in the NCAA Tournament when he scooped up a loose ball and hit Kenny Smith with a perfect pass for the game-winning layup... That score came with only three seconds left in the game... Originally came to Chapel Hill in the fall of 1982... Missed 11 games that year with a recurring foot injury from high school... Suffered a break in that same foot late in the summer of 1983 during a pickup game... Underwent surgery at that time and missed a lot of practice... Returned to workouts in January... But since he had missed so much practice, he was not in a position to play a key role for the Tar Heels... Decided to sit out the entire season... Had averaged 4.7 points in 25 games as a freshman... Led Carolina in free throw shooting that year, making 25 of 30 for an accuracy mark of 83.3... Named North Carolina's High School Player of the Year by the Associated Press following his senior season at Southern Durham High... Coached there by Larry Parrish... Competed in the U.S. Olympic Committee's National Sports Festival in the summer of 1982... Played on the South's Gold Medal-winning squad and made the Festival all-star team.

Had a good sophomore season as a starting forward last year... A versatile player who adds a special dimension to the Carolina lineup... Capable of playing any frontcourt position and did just that last season... Has good ballhandling skills which allowed the Tar Heels to play a lineup of three big men together at times a year ago... An excellent passer... Also has a good shooting touch... Has a career field goal percentage of 54.15, the 13th-best in school history... Was the team's best screener last season... A fine rebounder... Has a lot of savvy on the court... Is developing into a good defensive player... Played in 30 of Carolina's 36 games last year... Scored 274 points for a 9.1 average... Hit 56.6 percent from the field and 78.1 percent from the foul line... Averaged 5.3 rebounds and handed out 58 assists... Had career highs of 18 points and 11 rebounds against Middle Tennessee State in the Tar Heels' NCAA Tournament opener... Scored 16 of those points in the second half as Carolina broke away from a 31-31 halftime tie to win, 76-57... Also turned in a clutch performance against Wake Forest in the ACC Tournament... Scored all 12 of his points and grabbed five rebounds in the second half of that game as the Tar Heels scored a 72-61 overtime victory... Scored 10 points in the final 7:23 of regulation, including Carolina's last three baskets.. Also had six assists in that game, matching his career high set earlier in the year at LSU... Did a great job defensively in a victory at Duke... Also had 11 points, nine rebounds and five assists that night... Missed six games in early January after spraining an ankle against Stetson... Played in a reserve role as a freshman behind Sam Perkins and Brad Daugherty... Saw action in 30 games, averaging 3.4 points and 2.8 rebounds... Individual highlight of the season may have been eight points in a road win at Duke... Started the first ACC Tournament game in which he played... With Daugherty sidelined with a finger injury, Wolf had four points and seven rebounds in the 1984 Tournament opener against Clemson... Has worked hard in the off-season during his time at Carolina in a weight-lifting and running program... Has become an excellent long-distance runner... Ran a 4:59 mile in pre-season workouts this fall... Played on the United States team which took part in the Jones Cup competition in Taiwan last summer... Shot 59.3 percent from the field in nine games there and made all seven of his free throw attempts... Averaged 7.4 points and 5.7 rebounds... Joe is the brother of former Tar Heel center Jeff Wolf... Has two other brothers who also played collegiately—John at Lakeland College and Jim at Pennsylvania... Coached by Paul Swanson at Kohler High School.

Chancellor Christopher Fordham

As its chancellor since 1980, Dr. Christopher C. Fordham III has led the University of North Carolina to ever stronger standing as one of the nation's great academic, research and service institutions.

In report after report, the University has placed among the top two dozen colleges and universities in the nation and at the top among those in the South or Southeast. The University has been measured by its reputation among peers, the productivity of its faculty and graduates and its success in attracting federal and other outside funds for research and programs. By each criterion, it has been found excellent.

Building upon those honors, Fordham has directed the University into new areas critical to the nation's future.

Particularly visible among these initiatives have been efforts to extend the University's cooperative efforts with North Carolina's public schools and steps to incorporate technology into all appropriate aspects of the education process.

The school-related programs have reflected Fordham's philosophy that education is a continuum, with stronger public schools providing greater human resources for the University, which in turn produces the leaders of the future.

Significant efforts have included the Lyndhurst Fellowship Program, which supports bright students who will become the best teachers; the Center for Mathematics and Science Education, which works to increase the supply of qualified secondary school mathematics and science teachers; a College of Arts and Sciences program of workshops and internships for writing and foreign language teachers; and other innovative activities.

The emphasis on education quality overlaps considerably with the efforts Fordham has directed to gain acceptance for technology in all areas of academia.

The College of Arts and Sciences is conducting a computer-aided curriculum development program with support from IBM Corp., in which computers are being used in language tutorials, English composition and other areas.

The University also is constructing a new computer science building, which will assist faculty members in that area in pursuing the most advanced research. Teaching in computer science has been enhanced by a teleclassroom facility, designed and operated by the Media and Instructional Support Center, which enables classes to be taught concurrently at Carolina and Duke University with full two-way communication.

Fordham's leadership role extends beyond the bounds of the University. He was a founding member of the board of directors of the Microelectronics Center of North Carolina, and he holds several other memberships and committee appointments in professional organizations.

The University's success in these areas of emphasis has not come at the expense of its other programs.

Great strides in the health professions were made while Fordham was dean of the School of Medicine (1971-79) and vice chancellor for health affairs (1977-80). Medical school programs were expanded, faculty strengthened and minority enrollment increased and the school gained national prominence for its excellence and creativity. The Area Health Education Centers program was begun as a way to bring physicians closer to the population in this relatively rural state. A partnership among the state's four academic medical centers, community hospitals and health professionals throughout the state, AHEC has succeeded in achieving a more balanced distribution of doctors and other health professionals and is considered a model for decentralized health education.

New programs also have been undertaken in the other health affairs schools—dentistry, nursing, pharmacy and public health—and a cooperative effort has led to the creation of a Center for Health Promotion and Disease Prevention.

An equally impressive list of achievements has been recorded in the Division of Academic Affairs. The implementation of a new curriculum has incorporated basic skills in English, mathematics and foreign languages, as well as broad perspectives in science, in Western and non-Western culture, in aesthetics and in the humanities.

The School of Business Administration has undertaken numerous service programs and, in concert with the William R. Kenan Jr. Charitable Trust, has begun a center for the study of private enterprise, which will be housed in the Kenan Center of North Carolina, now under construction—with non-state funding.

Many of the accomplishments of Fordham's tenure as chancellor were mentioned prominently in the report of the University's yearlong self-study, which concluded early in 1985. The study found the University to be particularly effective in its undergraduate teaching, in scholarship among the faculty, in research achievement and in public service programs.

"This study will help guide the University and the state into reinforced and advanced excellence," Fordham said, "as we approach the 21st century."

A Greensboro native, Fordham is the son of an alumnus and he met his wife Barbara while they were at Chapel Hill. Their children also have attended the University.

Fordham earned his certificate in medicine from the then two-year medical school at UNC in 1949 and his M.D. from Harvard University. Except for a few relatively short periods away—for military service, dean of medicine at the Medical College of Georgia and a brief stint as a high federal government health official—he has been in Chapel Hill since then.

"When one's University calls, it's a very magnetic pull,' he said.

While under the influence of that magnetism, he has repaid the University with work that has brought personal distinction as well. Fordham is a former member of the Association of American Medical Colleges' executive council and past chairman of the AAMC and the National Council of Deans and Southern Regional Deans.

He is a diplomate of the American Board of Internal Medicine, a distinguished service member of the AAMC, a fellow of the American College of Physicians and a member of several other honorary societies. A member of the Institute of Medicine of the National Academy of Sciences, he presently serves on the institute's governing council.

He is an accomplished researcher and has written widely on health policy.

But above all, Fordham is the leader of the University at Chapel Hill, a job he continues to approach with missionary zeal.

"The University, I think, has a very special role," he has said, "because it's where the youngsters can reach for the stars. There are 13-year-olds all over the state of North Carolina who are striving to make better grades for one reason right now in this stage of their lives—so they can go to Carolina. And that's a wonderful aspiration for them to have."

Athletic Director John Swofford

In just five years as athletic director at the University of North Carolina, John Swofford has established himself as one of the most respected administrators in intercollegiate sports.

Swofford is in charge of one of the nation's best all-around athletic programs. Tar Heel football and basketball teams annually rank among the finest in America. In addition, Carolina fields outstanding teams in men's and women's non-revenue sports.

Although just beginning his sixth year in this position, Swofford has already seen Tar Heel teams win 31 Atlantic Coast Conference championships and seven national collegiate titles—one in basketball, two in lacrosse and four in women's soccer. Carolina's football team has played in four bowl games in the past five seasons. The Tar Heels have also won or tied for first place in the race for the Carmichael Cup, symbolic of overall athletic excellence in the ACC, for the past five years.

Certainly, credit for Carolina's on-the-field success must go to Swofford for his behind-the-scenes work. While the day-to-day running of the Athletic Department is a time-consuming task alone, Swofford has also undertaken several major projects in his five years as athletic director.

With Swofford in the lead, Carolina successfully completed a $34,000,000 fund-raising drive to construct a student activities center which will include a 22,000-seat basketball arena and an Olympic-size swimming pool. Plans call for an addition to Kenan Fieldhouse, the Student-Athlete Development Center, to be built after the 1985 football season. This building, a one-of-a-kind facility, will include the most modern equipment to aid student-athletes in their studies and physical development.

Since Swofford became athletic director, a new tennis stadium and clubhouse have been built; Boshamer Stadium has been expanded and dressing rooms renovated for the Tar Heel baseball team; three new holes have been completed at Finley Golf Course; the football practice fields have been rebuilt and lighted; a new Astroturf playing field installed; and the Fetzer Field track has been resurfaced.

In addition, the automation of the Athletic Department has been completed; the University has hosted the NCAA Golf Championships, an NCAA regional baseball tournament, the AIAW National Soccer Tournament, the AIAW National Softball Tournament and the NCAA Women's Soccer Championships; the academic support staff has been expanded; and major changes have been made in future Tar Heel football schedules.

Swofford has served as chairman of the NCAA Football Television Committee for the last year, a time in which the NCAA has faced one of its biggest problems—the dispute over football television rights. He is also a member of the NCAA Football Post-Season Bowl Committee and is past chairman of the ACC Television Committee.

These accomplishments are a good indication Swofford is well aware of the problems facing intercollegiate athletics and how to cope with them. But Chancellor Christopher Fordham knew that when he named him to replace Bill Cobey as athletic director on May 1, 1980. Cobey had resigned to pursue public office.

Swofford gives the credit for Carolina's recent successes to the people around him.

"We have an outstanding coaching, administrative and clerical staff, and with their help, our primary goal will be to continue the tradition of integrity and excellence that has been the trademark of Carolina athletics," he says. "Our athletic program is a part of a great university. It is a special place and we will strive to reflect her values and character.

"We will continue our commitment to a strong overall program and we will continually strive to operate on the principle that the student-athletes who are participants in our various sports are our greatest assets. We must be committed to their positive development as individuals while they are a part of our athletic program."

A native of North Wilkesboro, N.C., Swofford first came to Carolina as a Morehead Scholar in 1967. He graduated in 1971 with an A.B. in psychology and industrial relations.

He played quarterback and defensive back on Tar Heel football teams in 1969, 1970 and 1971. Those last two teams went to the Peach Bowl and Gator Bowl. He tied a then-school record against Vanderbilt in 1969 by throwing three touchdown passes in one game.

Swofford was named to the ACC Academic Honor Roll and Who's Who in College Athletics. He also served as president of the Fellowship of Christian Athletes on campus.

In 1973 he earned a masters in athletic administration at Ohio University. In his time there Swofford served as a graduate assistant to the assistant business manager of athletics.

From 1973 to 1976 he was athletic ticket manager and assistant to the director of athletic facilities and finance at the University of Virginia. His duties in that job included directing all ticket sales, advertising and promotions. He also handled game contract settlements, stadium and coliseum operations and team travel arrangements.

He returned to Carolina in May, 1976 as assistant athletic director and business manager, handling all the athletic department's business affairs. Among his many other responsibilities were handling fund-raising affairs, team travel and the athletic dining hall. He also coordinated sports camps.

Although he remained assistant athletic director, Swofford dropped the business manager title and was named assistant executive vice-president of the Educational Foundation in January, 1979. In that job he was in charge of the overall financial structure of the athletic department. His position with the Educational Foundation involved general office procedures, membership services and fund-raising.

Swofford is a member of the National Association of Collegiate Athletic Directors and is on the alumni advisory board for the Ohio University Sports Administration program. He received the Distinguished Alumni Award from Ohio University in 1984.

Swofford serves on the board of directors of the Chapel Hill Ronald McDonald House and North Carolina National Bank in Chapel Hill. He is also on the board of directors of North Carolina Amateur Sports which is handling the 1987 National Sports Festival. In addition, he is on the board of trustees of the Pop Warner Little Scholars, Inc. and a member of the 1984-85 University Planning Committee and the 1984-85 Chancellor's Task Force on University Development.

A regular jogger, Swofford enjoys reading and tennis. He is married to the former Becky Owens of North Wilkesboro. They have two children, Autumn and Chad.

Dean Smith

Dean Smith begins his 25th season as head basketball coach at the University of North Carolina, having accomplished almost everything imaginable in his sport.

Teams coached by Smith have won an NCAA championship, a National Invitation Tournament title and an Olympic Gold Medal. The only other coaches in history to accomplish that feat have been Pete Newell and Bobby Knight.

Smith's NCAA crown came in 1982 and his 1971 team won the NIT. He guided the United States to a sweep of the 1976 Summer Olympic Games in Montreal.

Smith, who played for the legendary Phog Allen at Kansas, is also one of only two men to play on an NCAA championship team and then coach one. Knight is the other.

In 24 seasons at Carolina, Smith's teams have won 551 games and lost only 165. That's a percentage of .770, the fourth-best mark in history of anyone who has coached at least 20 seasons on the major college level.

The men ahead of him?

Just three guys named Clair Bee, Adolph Rupp and John Wooden.

During the past 19 years Smith's Tar Heel teams have been among the most dominant in the game. Carolina has a record of 485-118 in that stretch, a winning percentage of .804. That's an average record of 25-6 each season and has been compiled against an always difficult schedule.

Perhaps the most amazing accomplishment of all is the fact Carolina has finished first in the Atlantic Coast Conference regular–season race 13 of those 19 years and was second on the other six occasions. No other school in any conference has ever finished first or second in its league standings for such a long period. Smith's teams have done that in what is generally regarded as the best-balanced league in college basketball. And two of those second-place teams actually won the conference championship in the ACC Tournament.

In fact, the Tar Heels have won nine Tournament titles in this same period. Carolina has won either the ACC regular-season or Tournament championship 15 times in the past 19 years and has been to a national post-season tournament each of those 19 seasons.

Under Smith, Carolina has made seven trips to the NCAA's Final Four. The only coach who has made more Final Four appearances than Smith is Wooden. In NCAA regional championships, Wooden is the leader with 12, followed by Smith with seven.

Wooden and Smith are also the winningest coaches in NCAA Tournament history. Wooden had 47 Tournament victories at UCLA and Smith ranks second with 31. Rupp is third with 30.

Carolina has been in the NCAA Tournament field each of the past 11 seasons. That's the longest current streak in the nation. The highlight of this era came in 1982 when the Tar Heels defeated Georgetown, 63-62, in one of the most exciting and best-played NCAA championship games of all time.

The Tar Heels have now won at least 20 games for 15 consecutive years. That gives Smith the longest streak of consecutive 20-win seasons in history. He also has had 13 seasons in which his teams have won at least 25 games, more than any other major college coach ever. Wooden had 11 seasons of at least 25 victories.

Despite suffering the greatest personnel losses in the country from the previous year (Matt Doherty, Michael Jordan and Sam Perkins), Smith guided Carolina to a 27-9 record in 1985. The Tar Heels finished the season ranked seventh in the national wire service polls, the ninth time in the last 10 years they have finished in the Top 10.

Success like that was one of the reasons Smith was inducted into the Naismith Basketball Hall of Fame in 1983. He was taken into the state of North Carolina's Sports Hall of Fame two years prior to that.

Actually, Smith's place among the great men of the game has been obvious for some time. Marquette Coach Rick Majerus touched on that a couple of years ago upon hearing that Joe Wolf, whom he had been recruiting, had decided to attend Carolina.

"Joe made a good choice," said Majerus. "North Carolina may very well be the best program in the country and Dean Smith may very well be the best coach of all time."

Such tributes from his peers are nothing new for Smith. For years rival coaches have talked about the consistency of his teams, the integrity of his program and the fact his players are also students.

"When you play against North Carolina and Dean Smith, that's the best," said California Coach Lou Campanelli after his James Madison team faced the Tar Heels in the 1983 NCAA Tournament. "That's the epitome of college basketball.

"They represent everything you want—dedication, class, attitude. As we built our program at James Madison, we've paid a lot of attention to that. If that reflects in our style of play, that we resemble North Carolina, then I consider that a compliment."

Virginia Coach Terry Holland touched more specifically on the consistency of Smith's teams a few years ago in talking about the ACC.

"Because of the league we're in, it's difficult to stay at the top every year," he said. "Only one team, North Carolina, has been able to do that. The rest of us have a couple of good years, then we have to fight for a couple of years and put it back together."

Despite all his successes at Carolina, one of Smith's best-known accomplishments actually came elsewhere. In 1976 he guided the United States basketball team to a sweep of the Summer Olympic Games in Montreal.

In only a few weeks he molded a college all-star team into a closely-knit unit. Still, the Americans faced the tremendous challenge of competing against international teams which had been playing together for years.

That team also faced the pressure of trying to regain the Gold Medal which had been lost in the controversial 1972 Games and putting the United States back at the top of international competition. With Smith emphasizing a tough pressure defense and fast-breaking team play on offense, the Americans did just that.

Smith accomplished this feat even though he did not have all of the best amateur players in the United States at his disposal. At that time, many of the top college players were turning down Olympic opportunities, preferring to prepare for professional careers. Players like Robert Parrish, Leon Douglas and John Lucas, for example, spurned Olympic tryouts.

However, the Americans still won the Montreal championship. In fact, four of Smith's Tar Heels played key roles in that Olympic triumph—Mitch Kupchak, Walter Davis, Tommy LaGarde and Phil Ford. Smith has now had players on the last six Olympic teams. In addition to the 1976 players, there were Larry Brown in 1964, Charlie Scott in 1968, Bobby Jones in 1972, Al Wood in 1980 and Sam Perkins and Michael Jordan in 1984.

How has Smith accomplished all this?

It's a combination of things. He has tremendous rapport with his players, he is a master teacher and his style of play gets amazing results.

Former Marquette Coach Al McGuire may have put it best when he said, "If anyone was ever born to be a coach, it's Dean Smith. He's the Jack Armstrong type person."

Carolina teams under Smith are known for unselfish play, great teamwork and a tenacious man-to-man defense. Although the Tar Heels specialize in a whirlwind, fast-breaking offense, they also have a disciplined attack and always rank among the national leaders in field goal percentage.

A recent NCAA study of the past 20 years showed that Carolina ranked first nationally in that period in field goal percentage, third in average victory margin and seventh in scoring.

That high ranking in scoring is no surprise. Although Smith is sometimes kidded about coaching "slowdowns" because of the four corners offense he uses late in some games, his teams usually rank among the scoring leaders.

Among Smith's many innovations are his run-and-jump defense, the mixing of pressure defenses, the point zone, team huddles at the foul line, the free-lance passing game, the four corners offense and the scramble defense.

"He is the most innovative, creative coach in college basketball," South Florida Coach Lee Rose once said of Smith. "Nobody is better. I've been coaching 20 years and I don't say that flippantly."

Smith's success at Carolina has been shared by those around him. Two of his former assistants, John Lotz and Kenny Rosemond, left Carolina to take head coaching jobs in the Southeastern Conference. Larry Brown, a former player and coach under Smith, is now the head coach at Smith's alma mater, Kansas. Smith's current assistants—Bill Guthridge, Eddie Fogler and Roy Williams—have all turned down head coaching jobs at major universities to remain in Chapel Hill. Smith, himself, has been offered numerous other coaching jobs, both on the college and professional level.

Interest of professional teams in Smith is no surprise. In the last 19 years alone, 28 of Smith's players have gone on to play pro basketball in this country and many others have played professionally in Europe.

Seven of Smith's players have won pro rookie-of-the-year honors—Billy Cunningham, Charlie Scott, Robert McAdoo, Bobby Jones, Walter Davis, Phil Ford and Michael Jordan. It is no coincidence that so many Tar Heel players have been successful in the NBA. Carolina players seem to make the adjustment from college to the pros quite easily. Jordan, in fact, won some NBA Player-of-the-Year honors last season.

Kevin Loughery, who coached Jordan in Chicago last year, gave Smith a lot of credit for Michael's quick success.

"Michael has had the most media hype I've ever seen in professional basketball and I was around Dr. J for three years," said Loughery. "He has handled it all extremely well.

"It's a tremendous tribute to the way Dean Smith, who is one of the greatest coaches of all time, handled this guy. You can see his training. We are very fortunate that he has had that coaching background."

Cotton Fitzsimmons, coach of the San Antonio Spurs, paid a similar compliment to Smith a couple of years ago.

"Give me someone who has played for Dean Smith and I know they'll play hard every night," he said. "These North Carolina kids take losses seriously. They have a lot of pride and that's a good trait."

Bobby Jones once gave Smith credit for his professional career in an interview with the NEW YORK TIMES.

"If I had gone to any other school, I probably would not have been in pro basketball," said Jones. "I was a shy and gangly kid, not very well coordinated when I began playing basketball in junior high school. At North Carolina they gave me the tools to play in the pros and I don't want to forget it."

Of course, Smith's players have performed pretty well in college as well as on the professional level. He has had more All-Americas than any active coach. On four occasions Smith's players have been named National Player of the Year—Ford in 1978, James Worthy in 1982 and Jordan in both 1983 and 1984. Jordan was a unanimous selection in the latter season.

A native of Emporia, Kansas and a graduate of Topeka High School, Smith attended the University of Kansas on an academic scholarship. He played freshman football and varsity basketball and baseball there. He was a member of Jayhawk basketball teams which won the national championship in 1952 and finished second in 1953.

Smith was assistant basketball coach and golf coach at the Air Force Academy in 1958 when he was brought to Carolina by Frank McGuire. He served as one of McGuire's assistants until being named head coach in 1961. That followed McGuire's departure to the NBA.

After taking Carolina to the NCAA title game in 1977, Smith was named National Coach of the Year by the National Association of Basketball Coaches. He received that same honor from the U.S. Basketball Writers Association in 1979 and from Medalist in 1982.

Smith is a great goodwill ambassador for the University. He is called upon to lecture at basketball clinics all over the world. He is a past president of the NABC. He was the only basketball coach among a group of college presidents who recently served on the NCAA Select Committee, which was appointed to study many of the problems facing intercollegiate athletics today.

Four years ago Smith was presented with the prestigious Golden Plate Award from the American Academy of Achievement which honors people from all fields. The only other coaches ever to receive that award have been Wooden, Bud Wilkinson, Bear Bryant, Joe Paterno and Tom Landry.

In his spare time Smith enjoys golf, tennis, music and reading. He has a special interest in theology.

Smith has five children. Daughters Sandy and Mrs. Sharon Kepley are Carolina graduates as is son Scott. Smith also has two younger daughters, Kristen Caroline and Kelly Marie. In addition, he has two grandchildren, Drew and Megan Kepley. Smith's wife, Linnea, is a physician.

Bill Guthridge

One of the premier coaches in college basketball is Bill Guthridge, chief assistant on Dean Smith's staff at the University of North Carolina.

Guthridge, now in his 19th season in Chapel Hill, is involved in all phases of the Tar Heel program. He has a thorough knowledge of all aspects of his profession—teaching, organizing, motivating and recruiting.

His reputation is such that Guthridge's name is usually mentioned when there is a major college vacancy even though he has indicated he is not interested in leaving Carolina. He has turned down several head coaching jobs and has had his name withdrawn from consideration for others.

"Bill has made a decision to stay in Chapel Hill and not seek other head coaching positions," says Smith. "I personally feel he should have taken several of the excellent opportunities he has had, but he's decided that's not what he wants.

"By staying here, he has certainly given great stability to our program. He's one of the top coaches in America and I'm including head coaches as well as assistants. His record as an assistant, first at Kansas State and then here, has been tremendous. He has made great contributions to both programs."

A 1960 Kansas State graduate, Guthridge has been connected with great teams throughout his basketball career. He played on three Wildcat teams which won Big Eight championships and has been a part of some of the greatest seasons in Tar Heel history.

In fact, Guthridge has been to the NCAA's Final Four a total of eight times—six as an assistant at Carolina, once as an assistant at Kansas State and once as a player.

Guthridge first came to Chapel Hill for the 1967-68 season. The Tar Heels have been in a national post-season tournament in all of his 18 years here. In that 18-year period, Carolina has been first or second in the Atlantic Coast Conference standings each season, has won either the ACC regular-season or tournament title 14 times, won the 1971 NIT and captured the NCAA championship in 1982.

Bill was also a key factor in the United States' basketball triumph in the 1976 Summer Olympic Games. He and Georgetown's John Thompson served as assistant coaches to Smith and also scouted the Americans' opponents.

In his time at Carolina, Guthridge has worked with both the team's offensive and defensive schemes. He is currently the Tar Heel shooting instructor. It is no coincidence that Carolina annually shoots better than 50 percent from the field. In fact, the Tar Heels have the best field goal percentage of any team in the country over the last decade. Last season Carolina was third nationally in field goal percentage (54.0) and ninth in free throw shooting (76.1), the only team to rank in the top 10 in both.

"Bill is an excellent teacher and technician," says Smith. "We didn't get as many easy shots off our defense last year as we have in the past, which makes our field goal percentage even more remarkable. When we got open shots we usually made them."

A native of Parsons, Kan., Guthridge played his high school basketball for Harold Johnson, one of two brothers who were innovators of the zone press in the 1930's.

At Kansas State he helped the Wildcats win the Big Eight championship in 1958, 1959 and 1960. Based on his leadership, academic record and athletic accomplishments, he was chosen one of the University's 13 most outstanding all-around seniors.

Following graduation, Guthridge coached at Scott City High in Kansas for two years before returning to his alma mater as an assistant to Tex Winter. During his time on the KSU staff, the Wildcats posted a 93-43 record, swept two Big Eight titles and once advanced to the Final Four.

In his first six years at Carolina, Guthridge coached Tar Heel freshman and junior varsity teams. He had a 72-25 record and won the Big Four championship four times, an outstanding feat in those days.

Smith gives him much credit for helping develop the players who have kept Carolina among the top basketball powers in the nation.

Besides working with Smith and Winter, two of the great names in coaching, Guthridge has also coached in Puerto Rico summer leagues twice. He was once named coach of the year and was invited to coach the 1968 Puerto Rican Olympic team.

Of course, Guthridge's greatest notoriety has come for his work at Carolina.

"Bill is highly respected by the players who have been through our program," says Smith. "He is sincere in his recruiting and I think that has made him a favorite of prospective student-athletes and their families. He is a man of great integrity."

Unlike many coaches, Guthridge says he actually enjoys recruiting.

"Some people say recruiting is undesirable, that it's the worst part of being a college coach," he says. "But my experiences have been very enjoyable. I think that has a lot to do with the type of young man which our university attracts."

Bill is considered an excellent judge of talent at the high school level. When he believes a high school player can develop into an excellent college player, his past record indicates he's right. Former Tar Heel star Bobby Jones is a prime example.

Guthridge, who got his B.S. in mathematics, has a master's degree in education and has taken courses at Carolina toward his Ph.D.

Guthridge has an excellent sense of humor and is one of the most popular after-dinner speakers in the Carolina athletic department.

Bill and his wife, Leesie, have two sons, Jamie and Stuart, and a daughter, Megan.

Eddie Fogler

Eddie Fogler, a former player for Dean Smith, is heading into his 13th year on the North Carolina coaching staff.

In his time as a player and coach here, Fogler has been involved in some of the Tar Heels' greatest seasons.

Fogler played on Carolina teams which won Atlantic Coast Conference championships in 1968 and 1969, advancing to the NCAA's Final Four each year. In his 12 seasons as a full-time coach, the Tar Heels have won eight ACC regular-season titles and five ACC Tournaments. Carolina has appeared in a national post-season tournament each year.

Counting his appearances as a player and coach, Fogler has now been to the Final Four a total of six times. Very few people in college basketball can match that figure.

Well respected in coaching circles, Fogler's name is usually mentioned when a head coaching job becomes available. He has already received a number of head coaching opportunities at major colleges, including one this past season. However, he has turned them all down to remain in Chapel Hill.

"Eddie is going to be a great college head coach if he decides that's the correct step for him to take," says Smith. "Right now, he's happy in his role here and has elected not to take advantage of the opportunities he's had.

"He brings a great mind to the coaching profession. He really was like an assistant coach on the floor in his playing days here when he quarterbacked some of our championship teams. He's a hard worker and has great enthusiasm for the sport.

"Most people in basketball know what a truly outstanding coach Eddie is. Even more would recognize that fact if Bill Guthridge had taken one of the many head coaching jobs he's been offered over the years. If that had happened, Eddie would have moved into the top assistant's job here and gotten even more attention than he has received."

Fogler has a solid background in fundamental basketball. He learned the game as a youngster in New York City against excellent competition. He is one of the few players ever to make the all-city team twice.

Eddie played in the backcourt on Tar Heel teams from 1967 to 1970. A playmaking guard, Fogler is considered one of the best passers and ballhandlers in school history. He still ranks as one of Carolina's all-time assist leaders.

In his three varsity seasons, the Tar Heels won 73 games and lost only 18. That's an average record of 24-6 each year. In addition to reaching the Final Four in 1968 and 1969, Carolina also played in the National Invitation Tournament in Fogler's senior season.

After receiving a bachelor's degree in mathematics in 1970, Fogler spent a year teaching and coaching at DeMatha High School in Washington, D.C. He was in charge of the junior varsity there.

He returned to Chapel Hill in the fall of 1971 as a graduate assistant on Smith's staff. Fogler worked that season with the Carolina freshmen and also helped with scouting and recruiting. He had his first coaching experience in the Final Four that year as Carolina reached the national semi-finals.

Fogler became a full-time assistant in 1973 and has made valuable contributions to the Tar Heel program. His work played a key role in helping Carolina reach the Final Four in 1977, 1981 and 1982. The Tar Heels won the national championship in 1982.

Fogler knows the game very well. He is an excellent teacher and a fine recruiter.

"Eddie enjoys recruiting and is very good at it because of his sincerity and work habits," says Smith. "He has a genuine love for the University and, as a result, he can present it well. Plus, he has a knack when recruiting players for accurately judging their future potential.

"However, Eddie isn't just a recruiter. He's very valuable to us at each practice session. He helps me with our defensive work. Since he was an outstanding point guard, he also works with our guards, both offensively and defensively. He has a very good feel for the game and certainly is very helpful on the bench during games."

Last summer Fogler served as an assistant coach on the United States basketball team which competed in the Maccabiah Games in Israel. The Americans won the championship there with a 95-94 victory over a powerful Isreali team.

Fogler enjoys all sports. He plays tennis and has a great interest in college football. He is married to the former Robin Sowell.

Roy Williams

Roy Williams begins his eighth season on the North Carolina basketball staff with a reputation as one of the best young coaches in the college game.

In fact, just last year Williams turned down a head coaching job at a Division I institution.

During his seven years in Chapel Hill, Williams has coached the Tar Heel junior varsity, worked with the varsity and assisted in recruiting and scouting. He has done an outstanding job in all of those areas.

In practice sessions, Williams works closely with Carolina's big men, helping them with their rebounding and positioning. He also works with Bill Guthridge on the Tar Heels' shooting techniques.

Although Williams has stayed in Chapel Hill for the last two years to work with a conditioning program for the team, he has also proven to be an excellent recruiter. Dean Smith credits him with being an important factor in the recruiting of the class of 1984 which included Sam Perkins and Matt Doherty.

"Roy is a highly-organized person who has all the characteristics of a great coach," says Smith. "He genuinely cares a great deal for his players. He's been instrumental in the success we've had here in recent years. He's very interested in being a college head coach and is going to be a great one. In fact, several college head coaches have come to Chapel Hill for advice and ideas from Roy.

"He has certainly proven himself as a college coach with the job his junior varsity teams have done against junior colleges and prep schools. For instance, with his tallest player at 6-4, his teams have played very well against Fork Union when that school had first Melvin Turpin and then Chris Washburn."

A native of Asheville, N.C., Williams played basketball and baseball at T.C. Roberson High School. He was a member of the freshman basketball team at Carolina during the 1968-69 season. He is a 1972 Tar Heel graduate and also got his master's degree here.

Prior to returning to Chapel Hill in 1978 as a member of Smith's staff, Williams had spent five seasons as athletic director and head basketball coach at Owen High School in Swannanoa, N.C.

"In addition to coaching our jayvee team and helping prepare the varsity, Roy is also a big help on the bench during games," says Smith. "He charts every possession of the game, marking what is run both offensively and defensively. That's essential if we need to make changes at halftime."

Williams is an avid golfer and shoots in the low 70's. Roy and his wife, Wanda, have a son, Scott, and a daughter, Kimberly.

The University

A magnificent campus has done much to earn The University of North Carolina the title "Southern Part of Heaven," but the University's renown for natural beauty has been more than equalled by its reputation as one of the world's foremost academic institutions.

"UNC looks like a college campus, with football-size quads and tree-lined walks," said "The New York Times Selective Guide to Colleges," which then praised the University for its academic excellence and gave it the highest possible rating for academics.

In a comprehensive evaluation published by the National Academy Press, Carolina was ranked as one of the foremost graduate and research institutions in the nation. The faculty was rated as the most outstanding in the Southeast and one of the best in the country.

The faculty outranked all others in the region in the humanities, mathematics and the physical sciences, and the social and behavioral sciences.

Other studies have rated various schools and departments as among the best, and the University Library was rated first in the Southeast and near the top nationally.

Such lofty standing also is reflected in the distinctions accorded faculty members and students. Members of the faculty have won major awards and held top positions in virtually every discipline in which Carolina has a program. Fifty-four Guggenheim fellowships have been awarded since 1951, and numerous Fulbrights and other coveted awards are received each year.

Nine Carolina students have been named Rhodes Scholars in the last 12 years, and the University ranks third nationally among public institutions in the total production of Rhodes scholars. The Morehead Scholarship Program, patterned after the Rhodes and considered the foremost of its kind, brings about 60 outstanding and well-rounded freshmen to campus each year.

The Pulitzer Prize, one of the most visible of all recognitions of excellence, has been awarded to University faculty members, alumni and to books published by the UNC Press, long considered one of the country's best academic presses.

The faculty's research and scholarship capabilities attract large sums of money each year in research and training grants and contracts. Ranking among the top 30 research institutions in the nation, Carolina received more than $74 million through 741 separate contracts and grants in 1983-84. The School of Medicine, which received more than $43 million of the total, had an approval rate of more than 95 percent for its funding applications, the third best in the nation.

Research conducted at Chapel Hill has resulted in scientific and scholarly advances in virtually every subject area.

The University serves North Carolinians in many ways besides educating the youth of today and the leaders of tomorrow and conducting varied and valuable research. Through its many outreach programs, business and government leaders are given the opportunity to participate in management courses. Physicians, dentists, lawyers and othe professionals are given the opportunity to take part in teaching and learning programs, and the Division of Extension and Continuing Education provides the public an opportunity to study and learn at home with a wide spectrum of offerings in both credit and noncredit courses.

The Area Health Education Centers program and the Institute of Government are considered models for outreach efforts, and the University has drawn national attention for its leading role in creating the Research Triangle Park, one of the most promising research and education centers in the world.

The flagship institution of the 16-campus consolidated university system, the University at Chapel Hill is the only state-supported institution of higher learning in North Carolina that has been elected to membership in the Association of American Universities, an organization of the 50 leading universities in the United States and Canada. Carolina became a member in 1922.

But excellence is not maintained by resting on institutional laurels, and Carolina continues to move ahead.

Early in 1985 the University completed a yearlong, detailed self-study, concentrating on its role as a major American research institution. Strengths were highlighted, but so were areas where the need was seen for improvement.

"This report can serve as a blueprint for development of the University into one of the top 10 research universities in the nation," said Dr. John D. Kasarda, chairman of the faculty steering committee that prepared the report.

"We see excellent prospects for developing new options in higher education and for splicing them to a tradition of excellence in learning that has accrued over 200 years, thereby extending and enriching that tradition," he said.

"This study will help guide the University and the state into reinforced and advanced excellence as we approach the 21st century," said University Chancellor Christopher C. Fordham III.

The need for the best of facilities also has been recognized. In the last two years, the University has dedicated the Walter Royal Davis Library, the Lineberger Cancer Research Center and the Hanes Art Center. Work proceeds on a new computer science building, an undergraduate chemistry laboratory building and the Kenan Center of North Carolina, which will house an institute for the study of private enterprise.

The motivation for Carolina's continuing thrust forward is simple. In 1795 it became the first state university to open its doors, and, as it approaches its bicentennial year, it is striving to remain first in as many ways as possible.

"In very few states can the most promising students truly reach for the stars at their own state-owned university, representing the best society has to offer," Fordham said.

"That the people have made these outstanding academic resources available—at such a modest cost—is part of the genius of the University of North Carolina."

South Building

The Student Activities Center

The new home of the North Carolina Tar Heels is the Student Activities Center, the most modern basketball arena in the nation.

Carolina is scheduled to move into the 21,426-seat SAC during the 1985-86 season. The opening of this building will mean more Tar Heel fans will get an opportunity to see Carolina in action than ever in the past. The SAC will seat more than twice as many people as Carmichael Auditorium, meaning more seats for students, alumni, faculty and staff.

The largest fundraising campaign in intercollegiate athletic history culminated in the construction of the SAC. Cost of the building was $34 million. All of that money came completely from private sources. No state or federal money was used in the construction.

Perhaps, the most amazing fact about that $34 million figure is that it was reached without a gift of over $1,000,000. Professional fundraisers say it is quite unusual for so much money to have been raised privately without one huge gift. But, that was the case at Carolina. Instead, over 2,200 different people contributed to the campaign.

The building itself occupies 300,000 square feet over seven and a half acres on the southern part of the campus. Set in a natural ravine, the SAC's exterior earth-tone color blends into the surroundings of the nearby woods in keeping with the natural beauty of the campus.

Housed in the SAC is the basketball arena, an Olympic-size 50-meter pool, dressing facilities for multi-school events and office space for athletic department staff.

The double-decked main arena, shaped as an octagon, is 340 feet by 380 feet. It will accomodate 7,000 more fans than any other Atlantic Coast Conference facility. In addition, the SAC will provide much needed space for physical education, recreation and intramurals.

Portions of the lower stands will be constructed on a telescoping platform which, when retracted, will provide enough floor space for three full-length basketball courts set side-by-side. This versatile feature will greatly enhance the University's ability to attract major political, cultural and other non-athletic events to the campus.

The main floor will be the most advanced basketball surface in existance. A seven-inch deep permanent maple court has been put down on hundreds of arched metal springs. The result is a one-eighth inch give when several players are in the same area. This Spring-Aire court system was patented almost a decade ago but has not been marketed until recently, making Carolina's floor one of a kind.

Because of the building's shape, all spectators are directly facing the main court with no seat more than 150 feet away. Lighting is computer-programmed. A $455,000 sound system includes a main speaker cluster, hanging from the ceiling, and 14 smaller clusters around the building. In addition, there are also 146 smaller speakers mounted beneath the upper level to be used at non-basketball events.

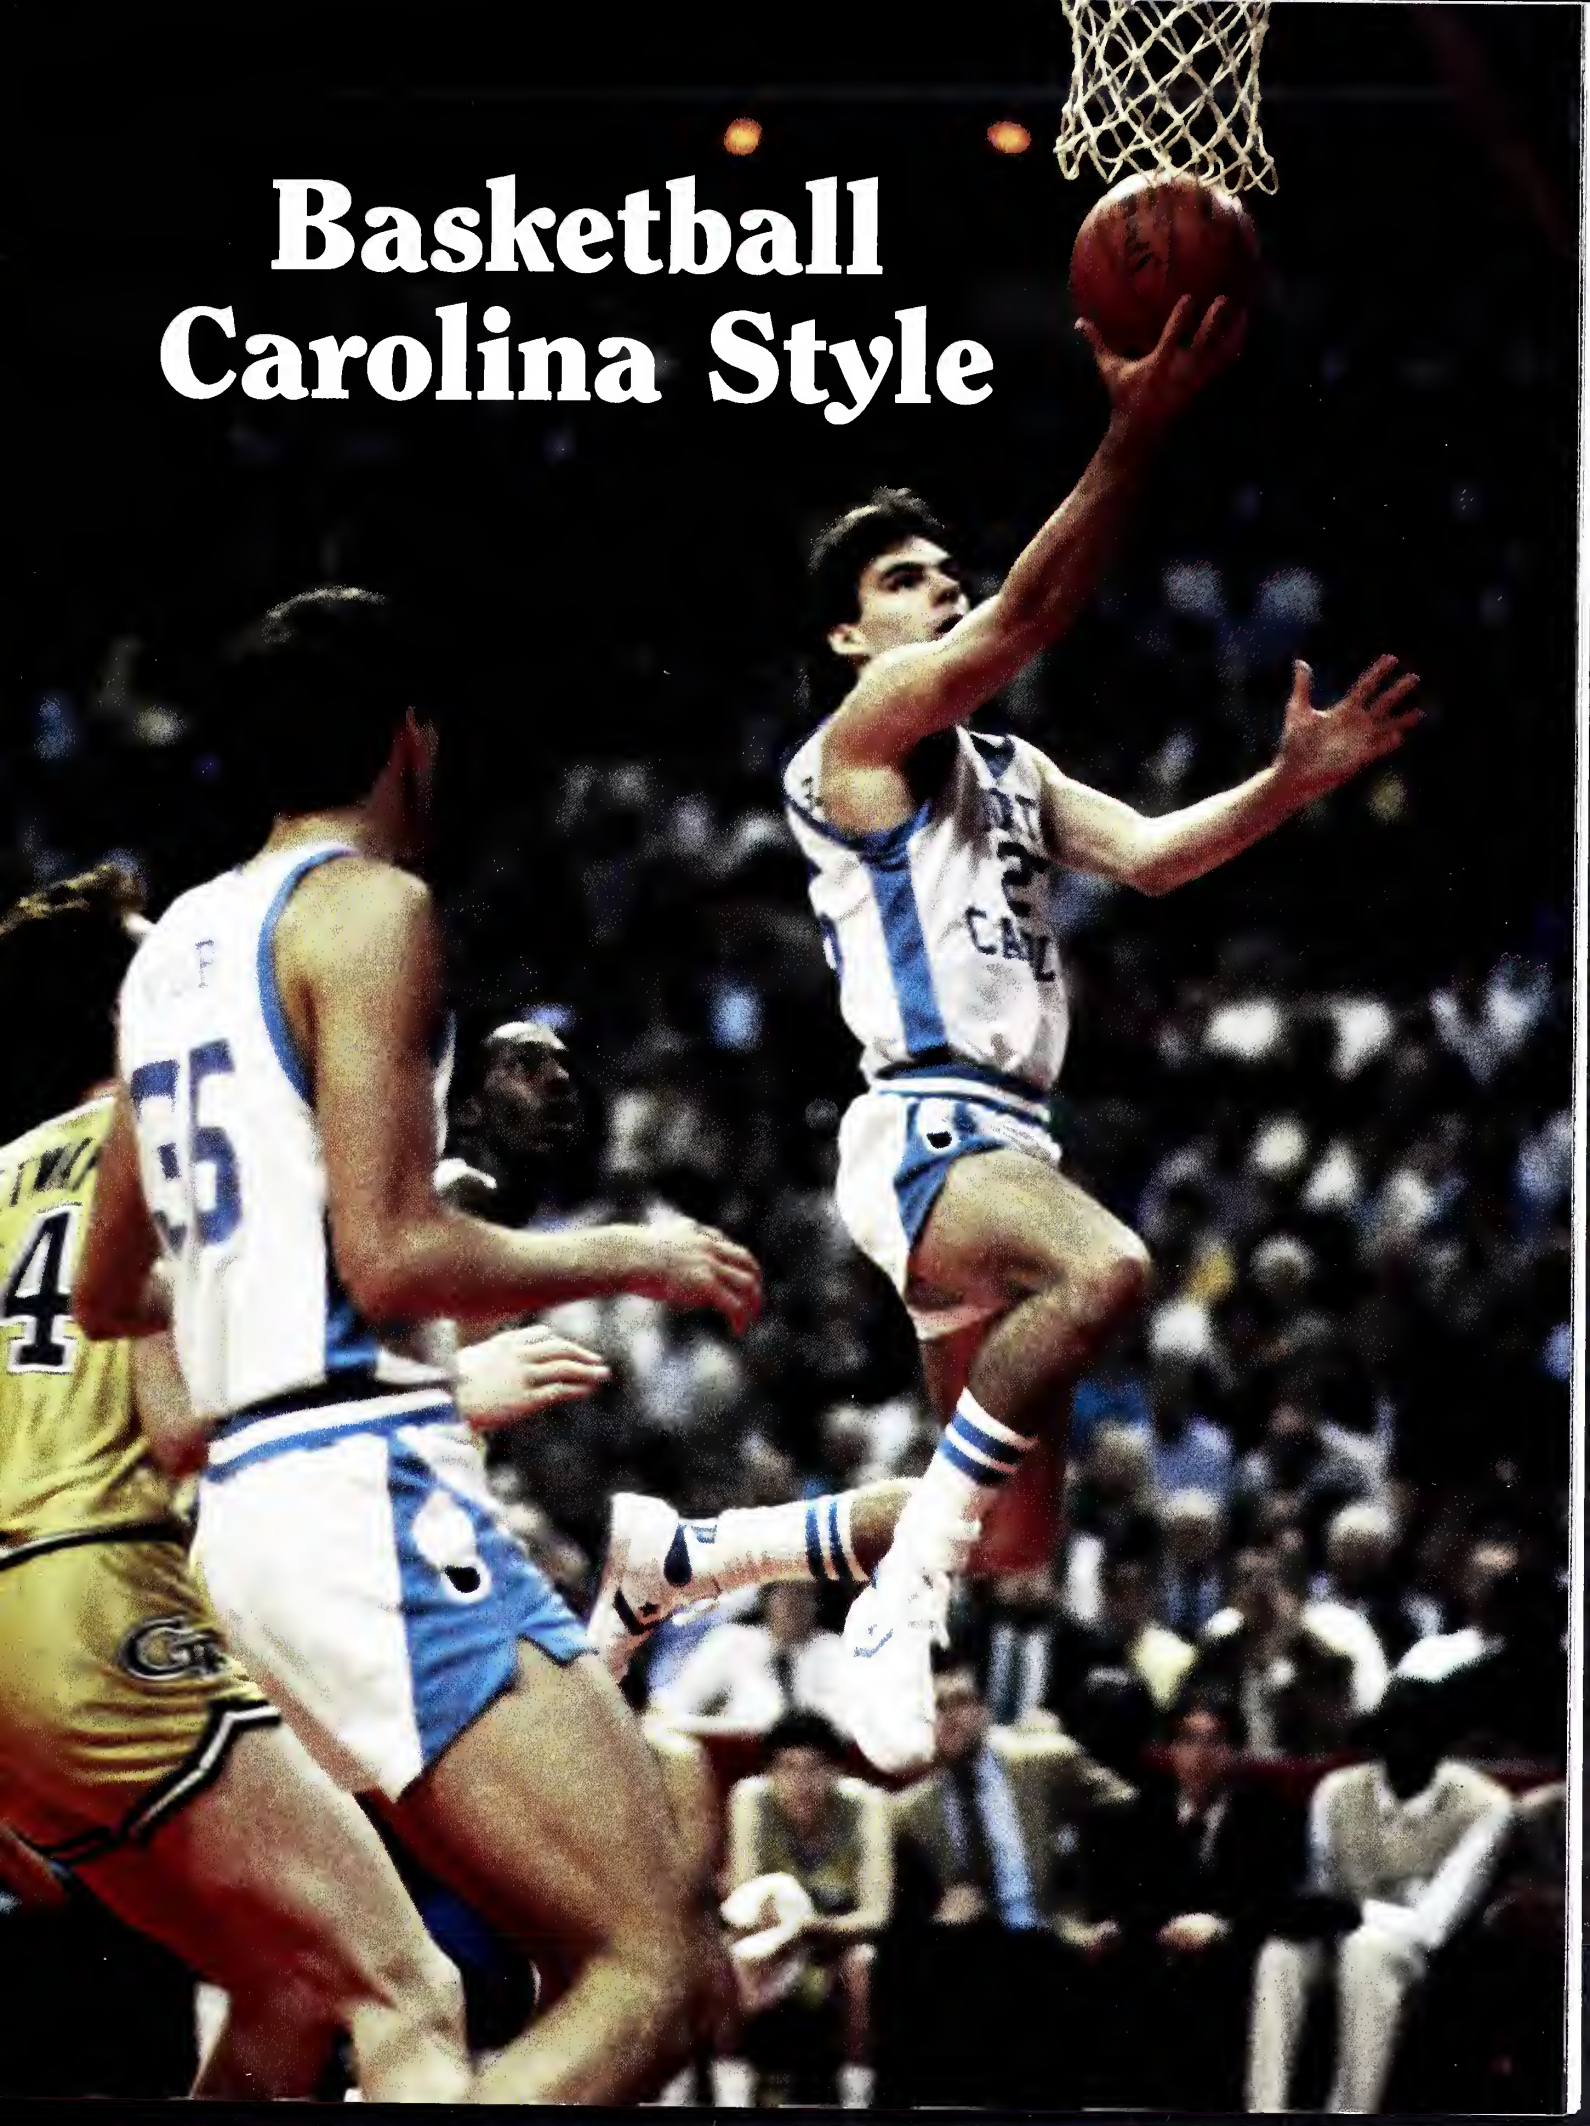
There are four scoreboards in the building, mounted on the upper deck facing. Every seat is a chair seat.

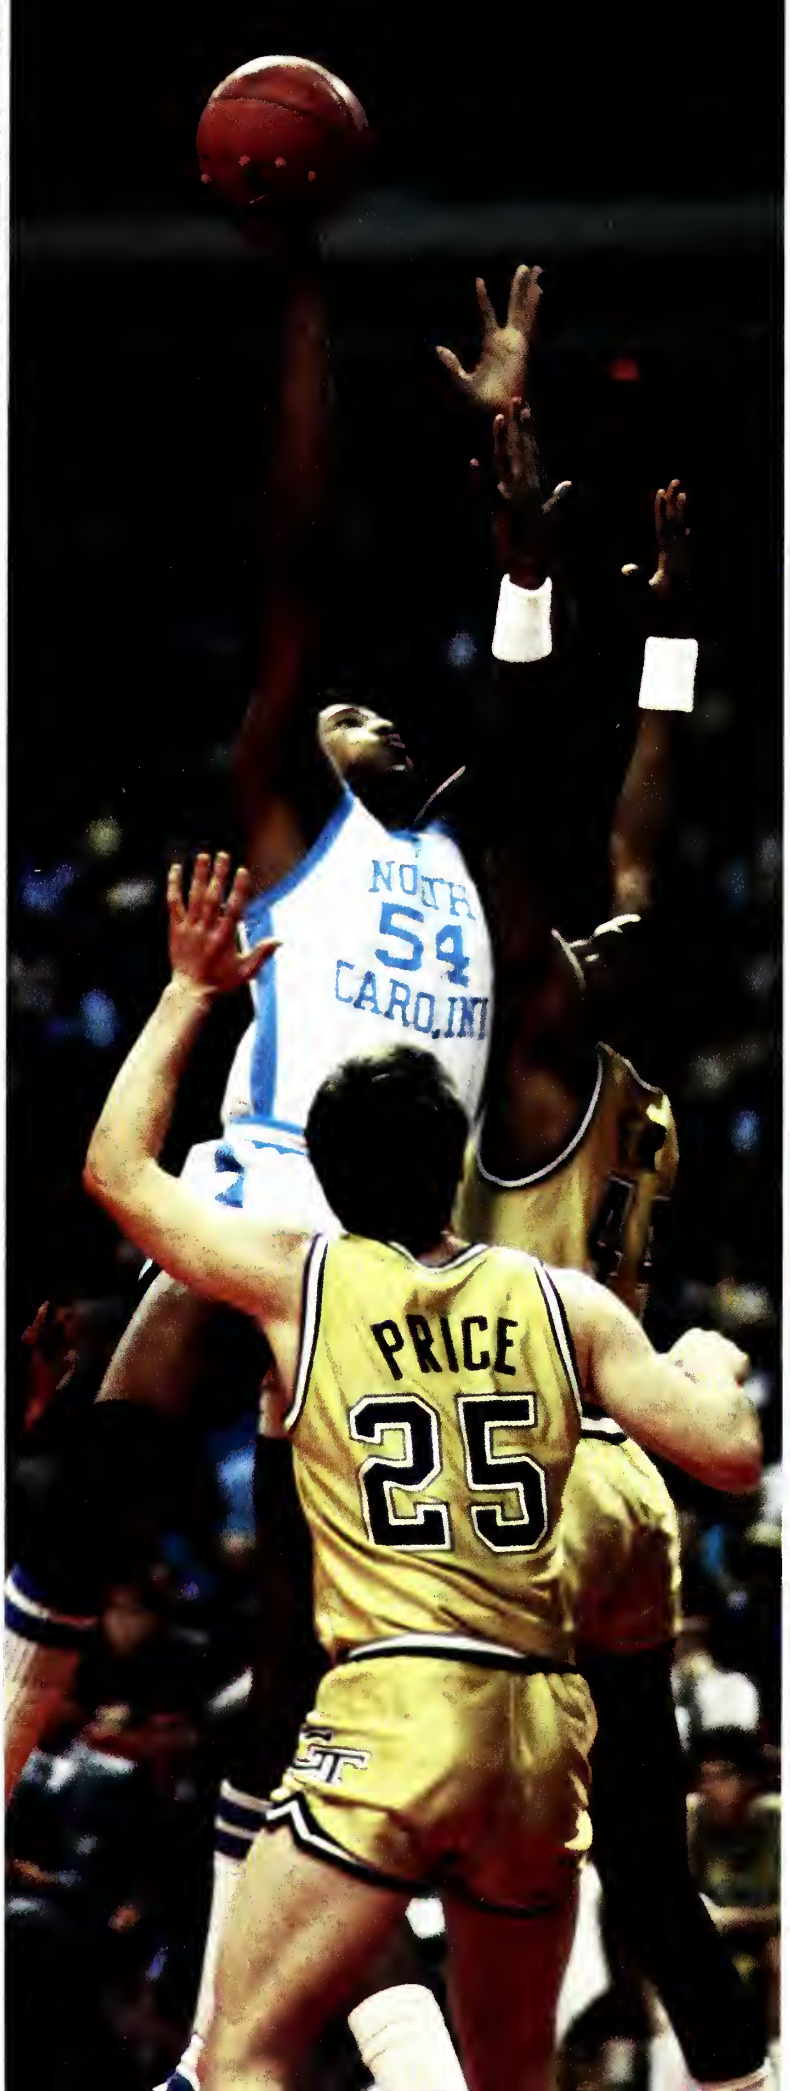
The concourse of the building is 22 feet wide and naturally lighted through tinted glass. A second level contains the offices of the basketball staff, the director of athletics and other athletic officials.

The Educational Foundation, Inc. is the organization which directed the fundraising efforts for the building. For years, members of the Foundation have provided the support necessary to entirely fund the financial aid program of the Carolina Athletic Department. That scholarship program costs in excess of $1,000,000 annually.

Certainly, there are few universities in the entire country which would have dared to undertake a project of such enormously challenging proportions. To have raised the $34 million and done so in a short period of time is an indication of the loyalty alumni have for the University and the great respect in which the Tar Heel basketball program is held.

Basketball Carolina Style





Basketball at the University of North Carolina is a very special sport and it's played in a hustling, fast-paced manner. A quick look at that style follows on the ensuing pages.

Tar Heels In International Competition

From Moscow to Mexico City, from London to Tokyo, University of North Carolina basketball players have traveled to the four corners of the globe over the past two decades showcasing their talents and, in many instances, leading the United States to unforgettable wins on the international level.

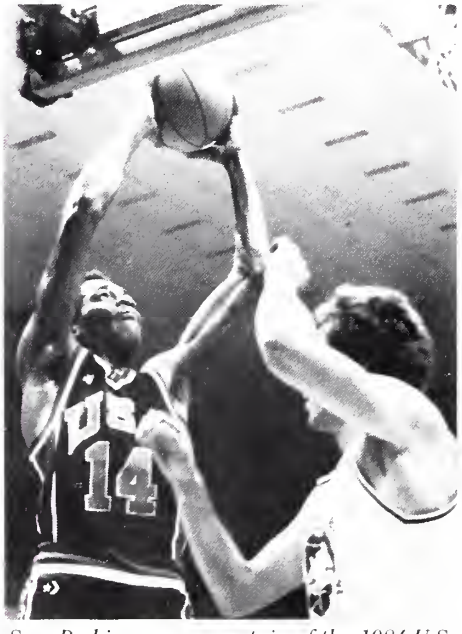
Indeed, Tar Heel stars, household names in American sports circles, have entertained millions of fans worldwide with their sparkling brand of play.

It has practically become a summertime tradition.

Carolina's basketball program has been spotlighted often in the world's most prestigious athletic gathering, the Olympic Games. In fact, the last six U.S. Olympic teams have included at least one Tar Heel. Beginning with Larry Brown, who played on the 1964 Gold Medal-winning team in Tokyo, a total of 10 Carolina players have been honored as Olympians. Even North Carolina Coach Dean Smith got into the act, guiding the 1976 U.S. squad to the Gold in Montreal. And his championship team included four Tar Heels—Walter Davis, Phil Ford, Mitch Kupchak and Tommy LaGarde.

Carolina players seem to adjust with relative ease to the international game, where the rules are slightly different and the play more physical. The playmaking wizardry of a Charlie Scott, for example, or the eye-opening dunks of a Michael Jordan, were just as amazing to Brazilians and Spaniards as they were to Atlantic Coast Conference rivals.

Jordan strung together two incredible weeks at the 1984 Summer Games, held in Los Angeles. A two-time National Player of the Year, he led the U.S. in scoring (17.1 ppg)—and in rave reviews.



Sam Perkins was co-captain of the 1984 U.S. Olympic Team.

Jordan, of course, wasn't the only Tar Heel to win critical acclaim in Los Angeles. Sam Perkins may not have been as spectacular as Jordan, but his play was nonetheless brilliant and his consistency unmatched.

Before the Games began, Jordan and Perkins were named U.S. co-captains. Their accomplishments in leading the U.S. to an eight-game sweep of the Gold Medal proved them more than worthy of that honor.

Despite the high scoring average, it was Jordan's mid-air magic that so often left opponents standing flat-footed, staring at him in disbelief.

His long jumpers and acrobatic moves thrilled the fans, delighted the news media and awed opposing coaches.

"Today he showed me nothing incredible," Spanish Coach Antonio Diaz-Miguel said after his team fell to the U.S. "He is always the same. He comes in there like an airplane. I don't know how he remains in the air when everybody else is going down. He is elastic."

Jordan's own teammates and coaches, though, were probably more impressed than anyone.

"I'm not sure anyone who watches the Olympics will be able to appreciate Jordan as much as our coaches and players do in practice," said George Raveling, a U.S. assistant coach. "One day, here in L.A., he made a move to the basket that just stunned the players. (Patrick) Ewing looked at (Wayman) Tisdale and just shook his head. He couldn't believe it."

Jordan was at his best in the first of two U.S. games versus Spain. He scored 24 points, sinking his last nine shots from the floor to finish 12 of 14. His steal and 35-foot jumper at the half-time buzzer gave the Americans a 46-41 lead. The U.S. blitzed the Spaniards in the second half to win, 101-68.

Perkins scored more than eight points a game and was America's third-leading rebounder during the Los Angeles fortnight. His inside defense was also outstanding.

Perhaps no one appreciated Perkins' talents more than U.S. Head Coach Bobby Knight, who repeatedly praised the three-time All-America. "Give me players like Sam Perkins," Knight said, "and I'll coach forever."

To no one's surprise, Jordan and Perkins were the American heroes in the Gold Medal game. Facing Spain for the second time, the U.S. romped, 96-65. Jordan scored 20 points on nine of 15 shooting, while Perkins had 12 points and seven rebounds.

Carolina's tradition of Olympic excellence, of course, had begun 20 years earlier with backcourt star Larry Brown. Charlie Scott represented the Tar Heels in 1968, when the U.S. swept to the title in Mexico City, and Bobby Jones was a member of the 1972 team, which settled for the Silver Medal amidst great controversy in Munich.

As a result of that disputed loss to the Soviet Union, there was tremendous pressure on the U.S. to recapture the Gold Medal in the 1976 Games. The Americans desperately needed the title to re-establish this nation's international basketball superiority and, in the meantime, to gain a little revenge against the Soviets.

This task fell upon the shoulders of Coach Smith and his top aide at Carolina, Bill Guthridge. The four Tar Heels featured on the roster each played key roles in leading the Americans to a six-game sweep of the coveted Gold.

With Coach Smith stressing aggressive defense and an unselfish offense, the U.S. routed Italy in the opening game. The Americans next encountered a fire-up Puerto-Rican team, but managed to avoid an upset thanks to Ford's clutch free-throw shooting in the final moments. The U.S. rolled into the finals by beating Yugoslavia, Czechoslovakia and Canada. However, a much-anticipated rematch with the Soviets was not to be. Russia had been ousted by the Yugoslavian team in the semi-finals. In the championship, the U.S. defeated the Yugoslavs to reclaim the Gold Medal.

Because of the Olympic boycott, the U.S. did not compete in the 1980 Games in Moscow. Still, Carolina's Al Wood starred on the American squad that compiled a 5-1 record against professional teams in a series of exhibition games held across the country.

But Olympic achievements alone do not fully explain why Carolina has had such a strong impact on international basketball. There have been plenty of other outstanding performances.

The Tar Heels have been represented in the last four Pan American Games. Robert McAdoo played on the 1971 U.S. team, while Tommy LaGarde starred for the 1975 squad. Mike O'Koren co-captained the 1979 team that won the Gold Medal in Puerto Rico.

Perkins and Jordan teamed up in 1983, leading the U.S. to the title in Caracas. Perkins was regarded as the most consistent American player in that tournament. Jordan keyed a couple of comeback victories with the last-second heroics that Tar Heel fans became so accustomed to during his three years in Chapel Hill.

One year before his Pan American appearance, O'Koren was the starting forward for the U.S. in Gregarian Cup competition in Moscow. LaGarde journeyed into the Soviet Union as well, as a member of the U.S. Continental Cup team in 1975. That team also played games in Greece, Yugoslavia and other areas of Europe.

Dennis Wuycik played on the U.S. pre-Olympic team which toured Europe in 1971. In the summer of 1973, a Soviet national team came to America to meet a U.S. all-star team. Carolina's George Karl and Bobby Jones both played instrumental roles in that series. Later that summer, Karl became one of the first Americans in decades to visit Mainland China. He belonged to a U.S. team which played there and, again, he was outstanding.

In the fall of 1973, Kupchak traveled to Moscow with a U.S. squad that took the title at the World University Games.

The summer after he helped the Tar Heels win the 1982 NCAA Championship, Jordan toured Europe on a U.S. all-star team. In 1983 Matt Doherty played on the U.S. Select Team in Southeast Asia.

Three current Tar Heels have international experience. Steve Hale played in Europe in 1983 with a team sponsored by Athletes in Action. Brad Daugherty, in 1984, and Joe Wolf, last summer, each represented Carolina on the U.S. team in the William Jones Cup Tournament in Taiwan. Both teams went 9-0 to win the championship.

Carolina's success across the seas, though, is more than a collection of fine individual efforts. On four occasions, the entire Tar Heel team has ventured to Europe for tournament competition.

In 1971, Carolina visited Madrid, Spain, for the International Christmas Tournament. In claiming the championship, the Tar Heels swept past Brazil, Spain and Real Madrid, the European champion. The game against Real Madrid was televised across Europe, and Carolina responded with a brilliant all-around performance.

Mitch Kupchak played in the 1973 World University Games in Moscow.

Coach Smith took his team back to Madrid for the same tournament in 1974, but this time the Tar Heels were not as fortunate, falling to a veteran Real Madrid club in the championship. Carolina did spring a major surprise, however, defeating the powerful Cuban National Team on a remarkable half-court shot at the buzzer by Walter Davis.

London was the destination in 1979, as the Tar Heels entered their third international Christmas tournament of the decade. Prior to the 1984 season, Carolina visited Greece and won four games against teams from Italy and the host nation. A Perkins' steal that led to a last-second shot by Jordan clinched one win. Perkins, Jordan and Buzz Peterson were selected to the all-tournament team.

Many Carolina players have gone on to successful pro basketball careers in Europe. Doug Moe accomplished the most, three times earning European Player of the Year accolades. Other Tar Heels who have played professionally in Europe include Dave Chadwick, Kim Huband, Craig Corson, Donn Johnston, John O'Donnell, Donald Washington, Ed Stahl, Bill Chambers, Bruce Buckley, Tom Zaliagiris, Geff Crompton, Randy Wiel, Jeff Wolf, Rich Yonakor, Pete Budko, Tommy LaGarde, John Virgil, Chris Brust and Jeb Barlow.

It seems that Carolina's outstanding basketball tradition, so well-documented in the U.S., has virtually become a global affair.

Carolina's Greatest Players

Out of the exciting past of Carolina basketball have come some of the greatest names the game has ever known—from Cartwright Carmichael and Jack Cobb of the Roaring Twenties to Billy Cunningham and Larry Miller of the Sizzling Sixties to Sam Perkins and Michael Jordan of the Ecstatic Eighties.

The list of Tar Heel superstars is an all but endless one. There have been scores of all-conference players, numerous All-Americas and six National Players of the Year. Many Tar Heel players have gone on to become standouts in professional basketball as well.

Who has been the best of them all?

Well, singling out Carolina's greatest player would be like trying to choose the brightest star in the heavens. The possibilities are just too many.

Most fans who try to make such a choice are biased because they saw a particular player give an incredible performance that can never be erased fron their minds. They are convinced their favorite player is the Tar Heels' all-time best because they were there the night he hit a miraculous game-winning shot, or played a flawless floor game or dominated a heralded opponent.

That is fun for fans, but a concrete, objective answer is impossible. How do you compare the abilities of a forward like James Worthy with those of a guard like Phil Ford or those of a recent star with those of one who played 25 years ago.?

You can't and we won't. Instead we will simply furnish the names of some amazing young athletes who have helped make Carolina the most magical name in college basketball today.

All of this started back in 1911 when Carolina fielded its first team. Marvin Ritch captained that squad, but history does not tell us how great a player he was.

However, history does tell a lot about Carolina's first great team—the 1924 national champions. The Tar Heels were 26-0 and led by Cartwright Carmichael, Jack Cobb and Monk McDonald.

While the style of play has changed drastically since then, these men are still recognized as three of Carolina's greatest stars. Cobb, in fact, is a member of the Helms Basketball Hall of Fame. He was a three-time All-America and the Helms National Player of the Year in 1926. Carmichael was twice named All-America and McDonald was an all-conference performer.

Bobby Jones

Although the Tar Heels did not have an All-America like Cobb or Carmichael in the 1930's, there were many outstanding players. Ivan (Jack) Glace, Earl Ruth, Virgil Weathers, Tom Alexander, Jim McCachren and Stewart (Snooks) Aitken made the All-Southern Conference team during that decade.

The big star of the early 1940's was George Glamack—"the Blind Bomber." Glamack had terrible eyesight and could barely see the basket while standing right under it. However, he developed the uncanny sense of knowing where the hoop was in relation to his position on the court. He perfected a hook shot which he used with either hand and with great accuracy. He was a two-time All-America and Helms Player of the Year in 1941. He's now in the Hall of Fame.

All-America John (Hook) Dillon was the star of the 1946 team which lost to Oklahoma A&M and big Bob Kurland in the national finals. Dillon, however, had an excellent supporting cast in Jim Jordan, Bones McKinney, Jim White and Bob Paxton. Jordan, in fact, had been an All-America in 1945 and the Most Valuable Player in the Southern Conference.

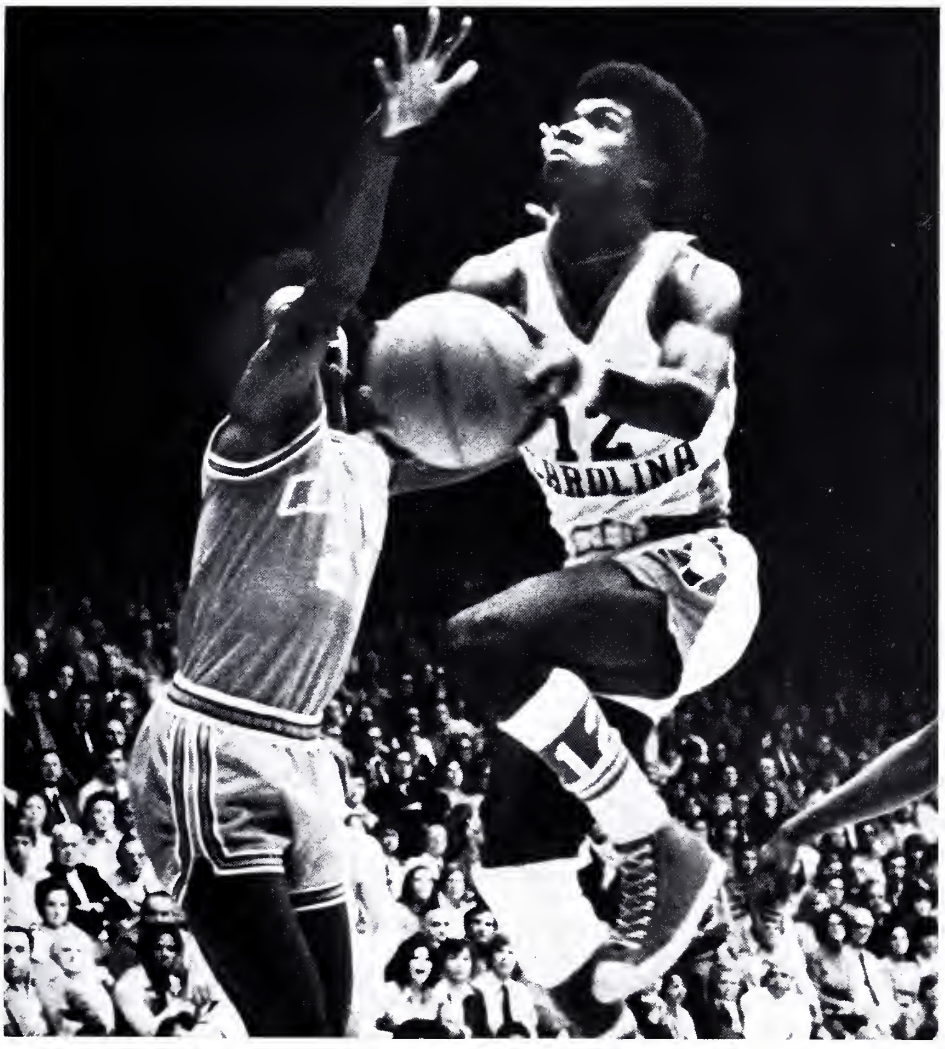
Eleven years later the Tar Heels again reached the national finals. This time they won the NCAA title, defeating Wilt Chamberlain and Kansas in a triple-overtime thriller that rates among the greatest college games ever.

Lennie Rosenbluth was the star of that team. He was named National Player of the Year as Carolina went 32-0. Other starters on that unforgettable team were Pete Brennan (an All-America the following season), Tommy Kearns, Joe Quigg and Bob Cunningham.

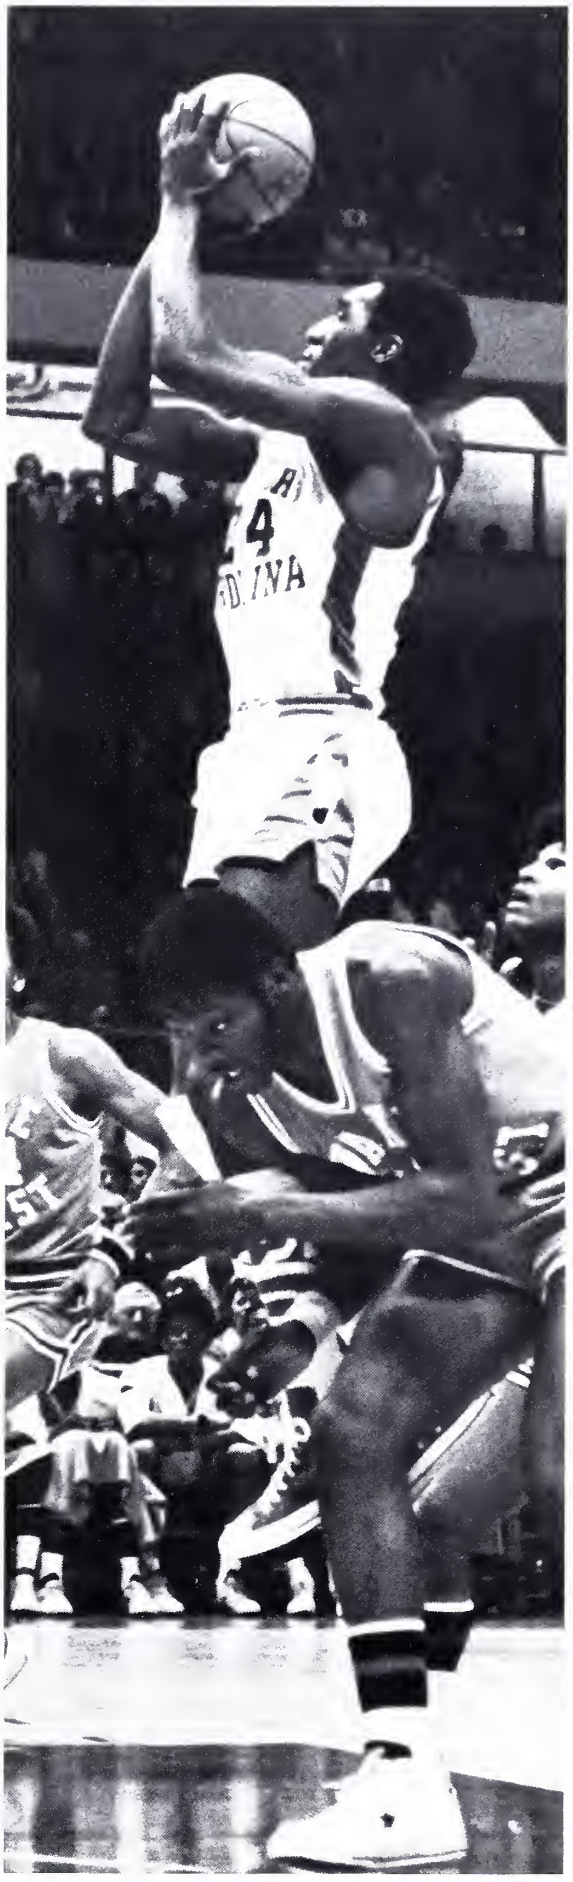
The stars were many during the 1960's. Big Lee Shaffer was the Atlantic Coast Conference Player of the Year in 1960. Shaffer was a great scorer and later was an all-star performer in the National Basketball Association with the Syracuse Nationals.

York Larese and Doug Moe also starred for the Tar Heels in the early part of the decade. Larese ranks as one of the greatest free throw shooters in Carolina history. Moe was a sensational all-around star and now coaches in the NBA.

A teammate of Moe's was Larry Brown, a dimunitive guard who rates as one of



Phil Ford



Walter Davis

Carolina's finest playmakers. Brown played on the 1964 U.S. Olympic team which swept the Gold Medal.

Billy Cunningham, a three-time All-ACC selection, was the next star on the Carolina scene. He made All-America in 1965. The "Kangaroo Kid" went on to become a great professional star with the Philadelphia 76ers and later coached that team.

Bob Lewis, a thin sharpshooter from Washington, D.C., followed Cunningham into the Tar Heel spotlight. He holds the Carolina single-game scoring record with 49 points against Florida State.

Next came Larry Miller, an All-America in 1968 when he led his team to the national finals where the Tar Heels lost to Lew Alcindor and UCLA. Miller twice was named the ACC Player of the Year. At 6-4 and 215 pounds, he was a rugged performer who dazzled crowds with driving layups and a great variety of shots.

Bill Bunting, Rusty Clark and Dick Grubar were starters on Carolina teams which won three straight ACC regular-season and tournament championships, swept three Eastern Regionals in a row and went to the final four in the nation.

Bunting had a great senior season and made All-ACC. Grubar was one of the most popular athletes to wear Carolina Blue and was a sparkling playmaker and defender. Clark was a tough defensive player and a great rebounder.

Then there was Charlie Scott, who excelled in every phase of the game. He made All-America in his senior season and was voted ACC Athlete of the Year. In 1968 he starred for the United States in the Olympic Games.

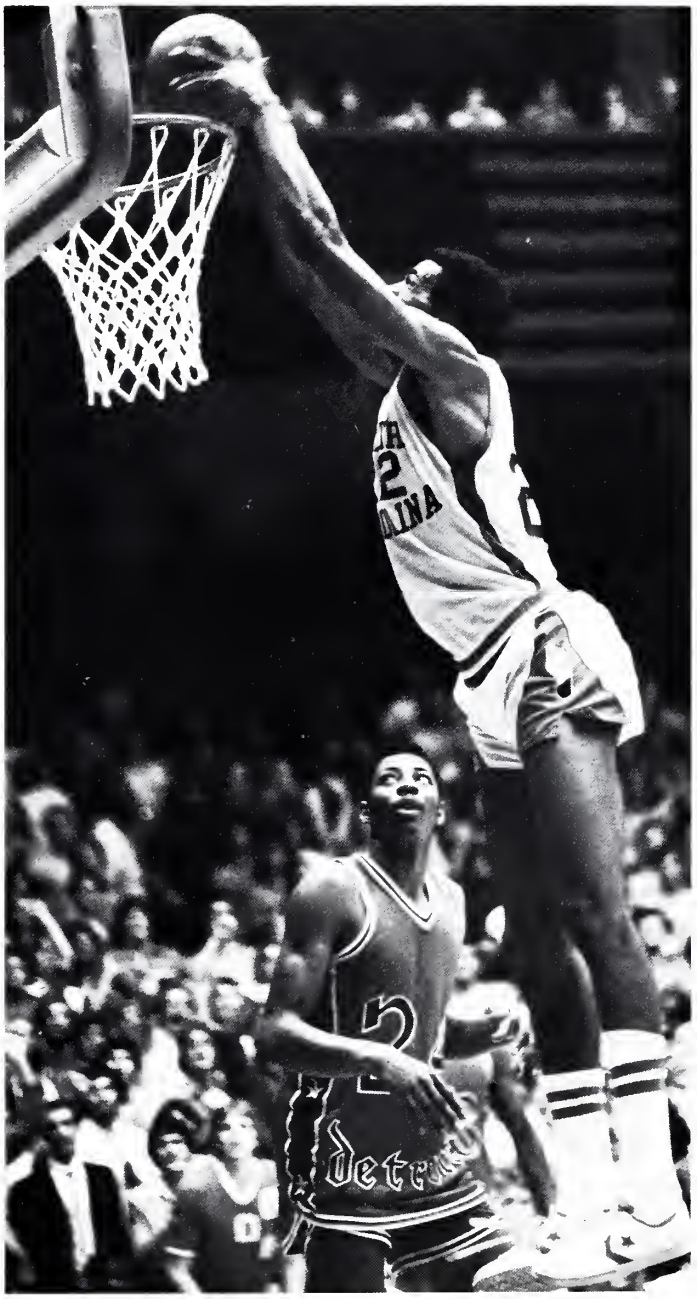
Three fine frontcourt players—Bill Chamberlain, Dennis Wuycik and Robert McAdoo—sparked Carolina teams in the early 1970's. Chamberlain was the Most Valuable Player in the 1971 National Invitation Tournament as the Tar Heels swept that title. Wuycik was a fine shooter and an aggressive rebounder. McAdoo had a great shooting touch and was an excellent rebounder. They led the Tar Heels to the NCAA's Final Four in 1972.

Another All-ACC performer in that period was George Karl, a three-year starter and a highly popular player. He amazed fans with his daring and diving on the court.

One of the most complete players to play the college game was Bobby Jones. Jones had great quickness and was a superb defender. He's one of the NBA's biggest stars.

Another great all-around player was Mitch

Mike O'Koren



Dudley Bradley

Kupchak, the 1976 ACC Player of the Year. Mitch led the Tar Heels to a 25-4 record in his senior season and played a key role in the Washington Bullets' 1978 NBA championship.

Then came Walter Davis, Tommy LaGarde and John Kuester. They played on Carolina teams which won 98 games and lost only 23. All three were excellent defensive players and good shooters.

Davis, in fact, is regarded as one of the greatest clutch players in Carolina history. He's a former NBA Rookie of the Year and an all-pro performer. Kuester was the Most Valuable Player in both the ACC Tournament and the Eastern Regionals as a senior. LaGarde was an All-America on the team chosen by the pro coaches.

And, of course, there was Phil Ford. He was National Player of the Year as a senior and is the all-time Carolina leader in both points and assists. He has been called the greatest guard ever to play the college game. Phil also won NBA Rookie of the Year honors.

One of the best defensive players at Carolina, or anywhere else for that matter, was Dudley Bradley. A first-round pro draft choice, Bradley was the MVP in the 1979 ACC Tournament.

The next big stars were a trio of dynamic forwards—Mike O'Koren, Al Wood and James Worthy. O'Koren was the sixth player chosen in the 1980 NBA draft after putting together a brilliant Carolina career. He is the only Carolina player to rank among the school's top 10 in scoring, rebounding and assists.

Wood capped a sensational four years by leading the Tar Heels to the 1981 NCAA championship game. He set an NCAA record with 39 points against Virginia in the national semifinals. Always a great shooter, Wood developed into a complete player at Carolina. He was the first senior selected in the NBA draft following his final year.

Worthy was named Co-National Player of the Year with Ralph Sampson by First Interstate Bank (Helms) in 1982. He led the Tar Heels to a 32-2 record and the NCAA championship. Worthy saved perhaps the greatest performances of his career for the stretch drive that year, being named MVP in the ACC Tournament, the Eastern Regionals and the Final Four. He had a career-high 28 points against Georgetown in the NCAA Finals and was the first player selected in the 1982 NBA draft.

Another key player on that 1982 team was Jimmy Black. As the senior point guard, Black quarterbacked the Tar Heels through one of the school's greatest seasons ever. Only Ford has ever handed out more assists in a Tar Heel uniform.

Al Wood

Other starters were Matt Doherty, Sam Perkins and Michael Jordan. Doherty was the perfect role player on the team. Whatever needed to be done, he was capable of doing it—whether that meant a big defensive play, an important basket or a perfectly executed pass. He and Davis are the only players in ACC history with 1,000 career points, 400 rebounds and 400 assists.

Perkins finished his career as Carolina's second-leading all-time scorer and the top rebounder in school history. A brilliant defensive player, Sam was one of the biggest stars on the 1984 U.S. Olympic Team in Los Angeles. But, that was was to be expected. Perkins always seemed to be at his best in the biggest games when the opponents had names like Sampson, Tisdale, Olajuwon and Ewing.

Jordan was the unanimous 1984 National Player of the Year after being named the country's top player in 1983 by The Sporting News. A 6-6 guard, Jordan was capable of dominating a game both offensively and defensively. It was his jump shot with 17 seconds to play which gave the Tar Heels the winning points in the 1982 NCAA Finals. He followed that up with more heroics during his next two seasons and then was the leading scorer on the U.S. Olympic Team in Los Angeles.

Now, you can see why it is impossible to select one player as Carolina's greatest ever. It is much easier to look for the brightest star in the sky than one in Carolina Blue.

The Educational Foundation

Moyer Smith

Neal Harrell

John Cherry

One of the most important organizations in the Carolina Athletic Department is the University's Educational Foundation.

It is the Educational Foundation which makes possible all athletic scholarships awarded by Carolina.

As the Tar Heels' sports program has grown through the years, the Foundation has done likewise. It currently has over 6,500 members who finance a scholarship program that costs $1,800,000 a year.

"Since its inauguration in 1938, the Foundation has provided scholarships, either partial or full, for over 4,000 student-athletes," says Ernie Williamson, the Foundation's executive vice-president.

Williamson feels the overall bonus of being a Foundation member is helping a worthy young student obtain a college education. He says the high caliber young athlete who is awarded a scholarship is a great representative of the University.

Any donation to the Foundation is welcome. However, membership in the Rams Club is restricted to those who contribute $150 or more.

Carolina was one of the first schools in the nation to set up an endowment program for athletics. This program was started in 1968 and has already surpassed the $7,000,000 mark.

The endowment program consists of $50,000 endowed scholarships, life memberships of $15,000 and $30,000, wills and bequests and a new dimension—a pooled income fund. Under the pooled income plan, a member gives a principal sum to the Foundation and then receives the interest off that during the remainder of his life.

A special room on the south wing of Kenan Fieldhouse serves as a meeting place for Rams and their families. This area is open two hours before football games and provides a lounge and picnic area for those who come early.

The Foundation operates on a dignified and realistic plane in compliance with all of the regulations of the National Collegiate Athletic Association and the Atlantic Coast Conference.

Other members of the Foundation staff are Moyer Smith, John Cherry and Neal Harrell. Along with Williamson, Mary Baggett, Wendy Mann, Terri Bare, Jean Gunter, and Dawn McPherson, they have made the Foundation better able to serve its members.

"We couldn't have the type program we do without the Educational Foundation," says Athletic Director John Swofford. "We've enlarged our staff in the last three years and I think the staff additions we have made will enable us to do a better job for our members."

Ernie Williamson

The man who stands at the helm of the Educational Foundation is popular Ernie Williamson, the executive vice-president.

The former star Carolina tackle is one of the most active individuals on the Tar Heel sports scene. He is constantly on the go—talking with Foundation members, speaking to prospective members or avidly following all of Carolina's athletic teams.

Williamson is a Carolina graduate with A.B. and M.A. degrees. The native of Crewe, Va. played one season of football here under Carl Snavely and was regarded as an outstanding tackle. He was lured away to professional football and played with New York and Washington before a knee injury ended his career.

Williamson returned to Chapel Hill to finish work on his degrees and then went to the University of the South at Sewanee, Tenn. He was an assistant coach there for two years and head coach for three seasons.

He returned to Carolina in 1957 to accept his present position. At one time he also served as a recruiter for the football program.

Ernie is married to the former Elva Smith of Lawrenceville, Va. They have a son, Wayne, and a daughter, Carole.
